There's a Warrior in every crowd

Every time someone turned around, there was a Warrior. Warriors were everywhere. Warriors were seen in parking lots, at sporting events, and even relaxing at home. When students and staff went out to eat, a Warrior could have made their food, waited on them, or even served them. Every time people looked in a crowd, they were sure to see a Warrior.

Warriors worked at such places as McDonald's, Pizza Hut, Subway, Three Flags, and Augsburger's. These were just a few of many. Most people realized that school was a job in itself, but somehow students found the time to make money and had fun doing it. Working was a very useful experience. It taught students how to work with people and to try hard at everything they did. It was hard to balance homework and a job, but it could be done! Just look at these great Warriors; they were everywhere! It was easy to see there was a Warrior in every crowd!

Academic Teams are out to win

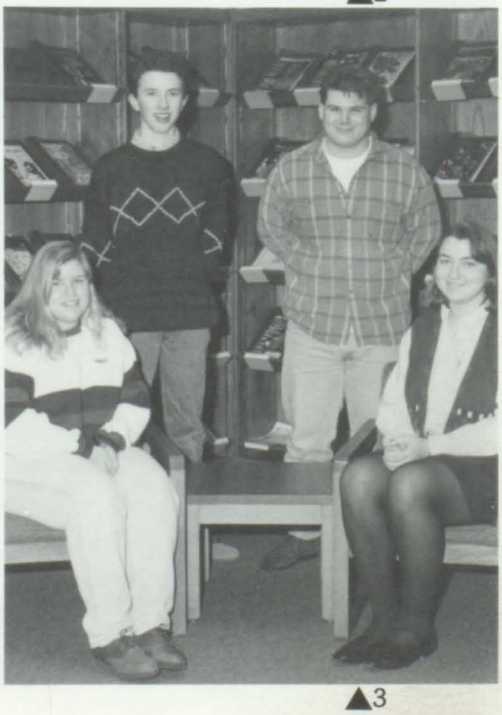

Wawasee's six academic teams included: English, coached by Mrs. Lant; fine arts, coached by Mrs. Dubach; math, coached by Miss. Kline; science; social studies, coached by Mrs. Martin; spell bowl, coached by Mrs. Martin. The spell bowl team was the first to compete in the fall. For the remaining teams this year's topic was the man on the moon from the 1960's. The teams studied for five months. Then they traveled to Bremen for the final competition on April 19. There were two earlier competitions to prepare for the April meet. "Ruth Craig and Amanda Ousley were both outstanding," Mrs. Lant stated. A few of the academic team members competed on more than one of the academic teams. Any student enrolled in Wawasee High School had the opportunity to compete on any of the six academic teams.

Warriors on the big screen!

The theme for Homecoming '93 was "Warriors on the big screen." Each class was given a specific movie for the week: seniors, Rocky; juniors, Ghostbusters; sophomores, Indiana Jones; freshmen, Batman. The seniors and juniors tied for first place in the overall competition; the sophomores were third; and the freshmen were fourth.

Throughout the week there were a variety of homecoming activities. There was dress up like a character in the movie day; pattern day; and green and gold day. Class competition began Tuesday morning with murals. The seniors came in first; juniors, second; sophomores, third; and freshmen, fourth. On Wednesday evening there was an ice cream social and following that was the 1993 talent show, where the sophomores won first place for their class skit. Powder Puff football was held on Thursday evening, and the juniors won. After the girls' game, the parking lot bash was held. An old car was brought in and students paid $.25 to smash it with a sledge hammer.

On Friday afternoon fall fling was held and that night the varsity football team lost to the Plymouth Rockies 16-20. During half-time Mia Rinehold and Dan Duncan were announced homecoming queen and king, with runners-up Becky Ray and Kurt Beer. Following the game there was a homecoming dance sponsored by the cheerleaders, featuring many balloons and the Tippy Dance Hall DJ.

New Warriors at Wawasee

See any new faces running around Wawasee or hear any new voices? These were probably the five foreign exchange students. They came from as far away as Germany and Russia to as close as Mexico. The students were Martina Steinke, Julie Suarez, Katya Yevtushenko, Iska Scharrelmann and Alban Zacharia. When they came to Wawasee, they were enrolled as seniors. That way they were able to go through all of the hectic senior activities throughout the year. They were all involved in extra curricular activities as well as regular classes. By the end of the school year, they learned how people in another country lived. They had the friends, the memories, and the knowledge that the U.S. could be much different than they heard.

WHS presents Anne of Green Gables

Anne of Green Gables was presented in the fall on November 12 and 13. Anne of Green Gables was set in Canada on Prince Edward Island in the early 1900's. The play was about a young awkward girl that was an orphan placed with a family that was expecting a young boy from the orphanage. The play revolved around her life and the mistakes she made. At the end of the play, Anne finally fell in love with a boy that she had been enemies with for a few years. The cast and crew rehearsed two to three hours a night from the end of September until the performance dates. Miss Wooldridge was the director; Mrs. Thornburg was the assistant director and in charge of publicity and tickets; Jamie Van Lue was in control of the lights; the drama club took care of the set. After the Saturday night performance, the cast and crew celebrated a job well done with pizza at the cast party.

The action is HOT

The intramural basketball season was quite exciting. X-Cubed came out on top, not losing a game all season. With KMM, Dead Crows, and Why all tied for second at 6 wins and 2 losses going into the tourney, the action had to be hot. The intramural volleyball season was just as exciting. There were between 12 and 15 teams competing with both males and females involved. Nicole Searfoss stated, "It was fun because there weren't any real rules. Everybody was just there for a good time."

"Follow the yellow brick road..."

The spring musical was the Wizard of Oz. This musical was chosen due to the enormous cast required. Everyone who tried out was given a part of some kind. There were many newcomers to the stage; the rookies outnumbered the experienced participants. There was also a new twist to the drama productions; Mrs. Thornburg had student directors and stage managers. The student director was Natalie Mickley; the student stage managers were Holly Beer and Teresa Maresh. "I got a new insight into the drama world by being back stage instead of on stage!" commented Natalie Mickley. It seemed as if every one followed the yellow brick road to anywhere but the auditorium for practice. Despite the lack of attendance at practice, the musical still came together in the end. Mrs. Thornburg stated, "The kids made it come together. At first I was apprehensive at having such a large cast, but it all worked out by opening night!"

Saturday school for everyone?!?

The winter of 1994 was one of the coldest ever with numerous record low temperatures causing the cancellation of a few school days: January 12, 13 and February 12. The question of when to make up days missed due to snow or other bad weather was answered by the Wawasee Community School administration with an unusual solution. They decided to use Saturdays instead of adding days on to the school calendar. To the dismay of many WHS students, the debate over the Saturday school question was answered with a resounding "Yes" by Wawasee High School administration. Surprisingly, attendance ran at about 85% for the two Saturdays, January 25 and March 25.

Margaret Sohl on why she attended the Saturday schools, "It was just like a regular school day. It wasn't optional; I had to. Most people will be glad towards the end of the year when they get anxious and want out of school!"

Why Whitney Pilcher attended the Saturday schools, "If I didn't, I wouldn't have perfect attendance."

Although Amanda Ousley did not attend school, she still had this to say, "How much more can you accomplish in five hours of school?"

"I didn't have a choice!" was Wendy Gordon's reply about why she went to school.

Josh Wells had this to say regarding the Saturday schools, "I went because school shapes a better tomorrow. It gave me something to do that was stimulating (right, Josh)!"

Stephanie Buck had this to say, "I didn't go because I went to an all-night skate, and it was my best friend's last day."

Tiffany Smith remarked, "I'm probably going to get lynched for this, but I thought going to school on Saturday was a better way to make up the snow days."

Rachel Beer commented, "I can sacrifice two of my Saturdays because that means two extra summer vacation days! Why not be in school when it's cold and wet outside rather than when it's hot and sunny outside!?!"

Steph Bender said, "We got bonus points in chemistry!"

T.J. Lintz's reasoning for the Saturday school, "The legislation in this state... vacuums!"

Tach Van Sickle said, "I couldn't miss another day, and I want to graduate on time!"

"I think it was not really necessary to make up days on Saturday. I feel it was just a legality, considering the I.U. game we watched in most of our classes. At least there's still spring break (I hope)!" stated Jenny Beezley, a junior.

Karena Zimmerman said, "I think it is totally stupid to make up days. When my older sisters were in school they could miss a week from school and never make any days up. And one of my sisters is going to be a doctor! So I really don't think it hurt her to have less than 180 days of school!"

"No one did anything; it was like a joke!" was Kevin Pletcher's response.

Kurt Beer had mixed emotions on the subject, "I thought it was a good and bad way to make up the days. It was good because we have to make up the day sometime, and I would prefer that it would not eat up my summer. But, there wasn't much accomplished in classes, so it was not productive, which is bad!"

Holli Larimer stated, "I don't want the year to seem longer; all my friends in Illinois get out of school in May!"

Teresa Maresh only came to school for one reason, "I couldn't miss my physics bonus points!"

Trisha Linville said, "Week ends are too precious to high school kids to waste on going to school."

Robynne Conn liked the idea of Saturday school because, "You didn't have to go for the whole day and now we don't have to make up days in the summer."

Erin Thornburg believed, "You don't lose that much from missing a couple of days."

Sam Newton liked Saturday school because, "You don't have to make up days in the summer."

"It was winter outside, and there was nothing else to do!" exclaimed Beth Boggs.

"It was two hours shorter than a real school day and it wasn't treated like a real school day; teachers let you watch TV, and listen to the radio," said Nic Searfoss.

Mike Atkins stated that, "The decision should be left up to the students."

Mandy Gawthrop thought, "At least it's done now and we won't have to worry about it in June. Plus we'll graduate on time!"

"I didn't have a good enough excuse not to come," was Cortney Fryback's response to the Saturday school situation.

Steph Junghans was thinking logically when she said, "It's only from 9:00 to 2:00, and if I didn't go to school, I'd just have to work. So why not?"

Yen Tran thought, "There's no other time and it's better than going after graduation!"

"It was a waste of time, and in most classes we just sat there," was Mike Keim's opinion.

Annie Egolf thought, "I can only handle going to school 5 days or it makes me nutty!"

Allison Lambert had a strong opinion about the make up days, "No one came and the day was a waste because if you missed, it really didn't matter because it was easy to make up. Most teachers were gone also!"

Daniele Laub had different reasons than most for attending the days. "Cortney and Sarah made me; if we had to go after graduation there's no way I would go."

Mrs. Baird thought up new ways to keep her students' spirits up, "I saved my fun review activities for those days so the students wouldn't be too negative."

Mrs. Hursh stated, "I do think it will be less successful at WHS if we do it again. Most realize they don't have to come, and there weren't any penalties or incentives."

Mr. Vitaniemi thought, "I had normal classes; students were well behaved and I thought it was a positive day."

"At 7:00 on those two Saturday mornings, I hated it, but now that they are made up I'm glad it's done," commented Mrs. Harkleroad.

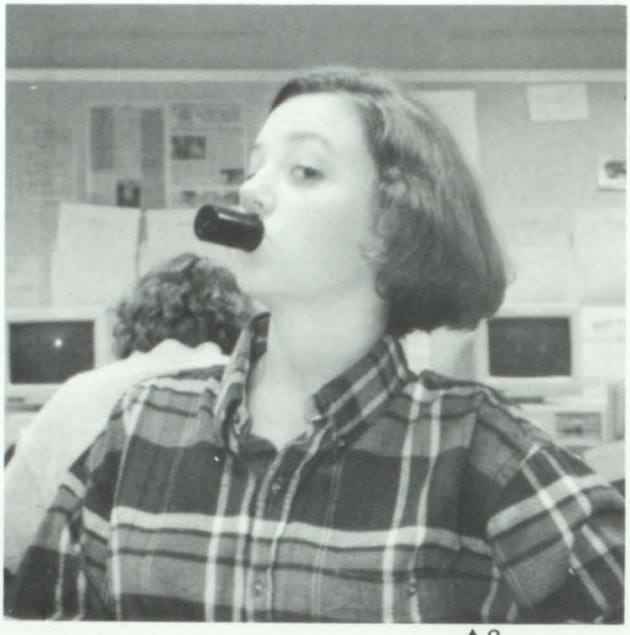

Mrs. Lant said, "We had class as usual. Most students were in attendance--I had about two absent each period."

Mrs. Schumm was 'business as usual' when she stated, "One day we reviewed for a test; another we actually had a test!"

In the Still of the Night

Prom was held at the Greencroft Center in Goshen on Saturday, May 21. The theme "In the Still of the Night" was carried out with gold paper and black gossamer draped throughout the room; there was a fountain at the entrance, and black marbleized balloons attached to alarm clocks were the centerpieces on the tables. Stephanie Bender and Keith Galloway announced the couples as they arrived. The band First Impressions provided the music for the evening. Becky Ray and Kurt Beer were crowned queen and king at 11:00. After Prom took place at the high school from 1:30 A.M. to 6:00 A.M. Activities included a hypnotist, swimming, basketball, volleyball, pizza, and movies. There was a D.J. sponsored by WAWC 103 as well as the local band Armed and Dangerous to supply some music. At 6:00 A.M. Sunday morning, students took off for Cedar Point.

Dream for tomorrow

It was a very hot Sunday, June 5, as 170 diplomas and four certificates of attendance were awarded at the 26th commencement exercises. Superintendent Henry Smith and class president Carmen Waldrop welcomed family and guests before the class of 1994 marched in to Pomp and Circumstance played by the symphony orchestra and organist Philip Fawley. The class motto challenged them to "Remember yesterday/ Dream for tomorrow/ Live for today." For the second year the class voted to include prayer in its ceremony, and Elizabeth Whiteman was selected by her classmates to give the invocation and Sarah Locke the benediction. Three speakers then addressed the audience. Salutatorian Mia Rinehold spoke to her class mates about the ingredients that make up one's faith; valedictorian Clarice Harris spoke of her high school memories; and principal Nyle Fox spoke about the importance of goals. After the awarding of the diplomas, the traditional candlelighting ceremony was held as the commencement choir sang "Stronger with Time." Outside, graduates tossed their hats in celebration as another chapter in their lives was about to begin.

So long, Seniors

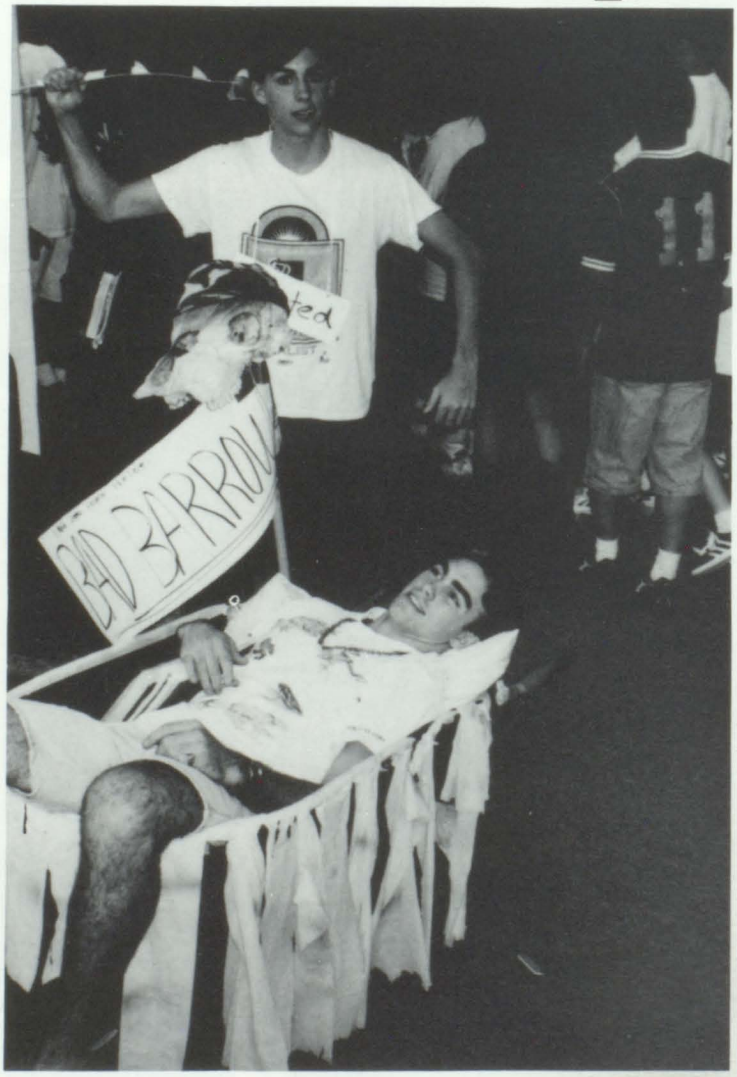

So Long Senior Week was filled with fun activities. There were three dress up days: get up and go day (PJ's and sweats); twin day; and college sweat shirt day. Most seniors came up with crazy ideas for their rented underclassmen on Friday. Wheelbarrows, wagons and crazy outfits were seen throughout the day. The underclassmen could respond by either jailing seniors or sending them Hershey's Kisses. A beautiful Friday afternoon finished off the events with spring fling. Results came out somewhat even. The sophomores won the relay race which included stations with skateboards, hula hoops, cartwheels, grocery carts and pogo sticks. The juniors won the water balloon volleyball game. The tug of war championship went to the seniors. The freshmen participated in all events but will have to wait until next year. This was a fun week to say good-bye to the seniors.

The seniors pulled together nicely to participate." First semester in the overall homecoming results the seniors won the mural competition and the lip sync and tied with the juniors for a first place overall. For penny pitch the seniors collected a total of $536.14, or 22% of the total.

Second semester the class had to make decisions on the prom theme, after prom, senior banquet, graduation, So Long Senior week, and the question of prayer at graduation.

They continued to accumulate funds for their senior activities. Their money making project, selling candy and picture frames, brought in $18,000 and the junior class earned 43% of the sale as profit. This was the most profit made by any junior class.

Juniors also participated in the canned food drive in December. The grand total of items brought in was 1151 cans with the juniors bringing in 140 cans. Academically, the juniors were required to take U.S. history and English, this being the first year they chose between college prep or vocational classes. SOPHOMORES

The sophomore class had a very successful year. The sophomores studied a variety of subjects including required English, health, world history, science, and math. The sophomores and the seniors were the only classes that reported to homeroom as a group, the sophomores going to the spectator gym. They tried their best in the fall fling but still came in third. The sophomores raised a total of $314.17 for penny pitch which was 13 percent of the school total. They also helped out the needy by bringing in 512 cans of food in December which was more than any other class. The sophomores sponsored the annual chicken barbecue in May to help build their treasury for senior activities. The sophomores had a very successful second year of high school.

FRESHMEN

The class of 1997 worked together, determined to make their first year of high school their best. After a time of getting used to their new surroundings, their first activity was the homecoming festivities. They put in a good effort, but ended up placing 4th overall. The freshmen also had the opportunity to purchase high school class rings for the first time. The freshman sponsors decided to experiment with the homeroom situation by placing the freshmen in different classrooms instead of the traditional P.E. gymnasium for homeroom. When Penny Pitch came around, the freshmen were eager to participate. Their class total was $816.99. Their contribution made up 34% of the school total, with Mrs. Pletcher's 4th period class at the top. The freshmen had a very productive first year of high school.

Creative minds at work!

The art department was made up of two faculty members: Mr. Johnson and Mrs. Bryan. The annual pumpkin carve was held on October 26 for both the art club and interested art students. Several art students attended, ate refreshments, and decorated pumpkins. The Art Show was held Friday April 22 and Saturday April 23. The judges for the art show came from the surrounding communities and were practicing artists, art enthusiasts, or educators with art background. Another event that was held was the corporation art show, traveling to bank lobbies in the three school communities. New art classes were planned for 1994-1995. To utilize the new darkroom, photography was offered as a one semester class. It involved compositional camera work and dark room lab work. Also the crafts class was broken up into three one semester classes: ceramics, three dimensional design, and print making .

Getting a little vocal

Dream Company and Varsity Singers were back in the sing of things. They performed again at the solo and ensemble state competition in Indianapolis. Both choirs received first place ratings. Individuals that acquired first place ratings at the competition were Karena Zimmerman, Kathy Roose, Josh Bess, Matt Stoll, and Aaron Scantlen, vocal solo; Rachel Beer, piano solo. Also there were two small ensembles consisting of Charity Weaver, Rebecca Glaser, Natalie Dick, Leslie Garner, Diandra Shock, and Rebecca Schrader; and Aaron Scantlen, Gerric Walker, Mike Howell, Jamie Van Lue, Josh Bess, and Matt Stoll who received superior ratings. The choirs also participated in various concerts for individual groups and clubs in the community. Both choirs held fund raisers which included selling chocolates, selling fruit, and a car wash. A part of the money made helped fund the choirs' trip to Cedar Point in the spring.

Singing away

The choirs, which included the treble choir, mixed choir, and concert choir, were those groups of students Wawasee heard this year singing their hearts out at every concert. They did a really outstanding job under the direction of Mr. Tom Beckett. Mr. Beckett directed all of the choirs at Wawasee. They performed in their regular concerts including the annual Christmas Concert, Music Festival, and Spring Extravaganza. They also participated in a commencement choir at graduation. To be a part of the concert and treble choirs, students had to audition for placement. Those choirs had combinations of sophomores, juniors, and seniors. There was no audition for the mixed choir. It consisted of only freshmen. The choirs did an excellent job.

Marching Warrior Pride

Congratulations to the marching band and their new director Mr. Clark for their outstanding performance. The marching band won an award for Best General Effect and Best Pit Crew at the Hamilton Southern Invitational Band Contest. The color guard won Best of Show in the fall. They raised money in November by selling grapefruit. Then later in March they participated in the annual music department candy fund raiser. The band received a new trailer and new percussion instruments. The new trailer was a donation from the Supreme Corporation to be used for trips to parades and competitions. The Corporation Music Festival was based around Walt Disney and the band practiced hard to get ready for the March 17 date. Band members stated that band was hard this year, but they enjoyed the tough practices knowing that it was helping the group.

Stringing to success

Mrs. Dubach was the new orchestra director. She was born in Washington D.C., but called Oklahoma home with12 years experience in the field of music. She did a variety of new things with the Wawasee orchestra. In class the orchestra students played their string instruments with the piano. Mrs. Dubach was trying to develop their ensemble skills, sight reading, and work on their rhythm. Some of the songs they played for the Disney oriented Corporation Music Festival were "Dance of the Hours" from Fantasia, the title song from Beauty and the Beast and for the finale "A Small World."

Let's get down to business

The business department taught a variety of classes: accounting, keyboarding, computer application, intro to business, and marketing. Students were able to enjoy throughout the year the marketing window displays in the upstairs showcases, designed to present communication skills. Computer applications was a challenging class in which students worked at their own pace on Word Perfect. The keyboarding class was a great help for all students, teaching them the computer skills needed in all their other classes. The business department prepared students for the real world by teaching the basic skills of the business world.

PE is heart pounding excitement

The physical education department was extremely busy in preparation for all the changes that must be made for next year's exciting new program. Freshmen would no longer be required to take an entire year of basic P.E. It will be broken up into a variety of new and different classes that have never been offered before. Students will be able to participate in a semester of team oriented sports or individual sports, depending on which a student preferred. In addition to planning the course offering changes, there was also the addition of a new P.E. teacher, Mrs. Dillbone, who replaced Mrs. Sumpter while she was on her maternity leave. Furthermore, Mrs. Peterson was honored by being presented with a service award from the IHSAA for 20 years of coaching. With all these changes taking place, it was no wonder that PE was heart pounding excitement!

What an exciting year for math

There were exciting things going on in the math department. "One of them was teaching students who were excited about learning," said Mrs. Martin. "Working with other teachers that loved their jobs as much as I do helped me to enjoy the school year to its fullest," commented Mr. Zolman. The department spent the year working on a variety of things. The math teachers met monthly to discuss the department, school policies, and the up coming trends in education. The best things about math? "Definitely the teachers and cooperative learning in smaller groups helped out the classroom learning," claimed Amanda Shipley.

Language arts expands its boundaries

Computers played an immense role in the English department. Mrs. Thornburg made a blanket statement concerning the entire language arts department by saying, "Computers have really impacted all of us! The writing lab is a super addition to research classes especially." In completing this year, all WHS students learned MS Works thanks to their English classes. Senior Kathy Haddock commented on the computer system, "It's easier to write your reports, papers, and themes on computers, but it's not always as convenient as doing it at home." Teachers used the Integrade system as an alternative means of recording and computing grades. They also participated in the curriculum vertical planning, which was a new system that would prove to be extremely helpful to all students in the corporation. This new system would insure that a student would learn enough during that year to be able to fully comprehend the next year's courses. Every year two juniors are selected to participate in the National Council of Teachers of English writing contest. This year Ruth Craig and Katy Mahnensmith were selected.

Keeping the school together

The cooks and custodians were the people who kept this school together. The cooks made the food for lunch in the morning and cleaned up after lunch. Susie Kern was in charge of the cooking staff. She kept the staff working and kept up with all of the paperwork. The custodians were constantly needed throughout the day. They were always being called on for various jobs. The school really appreciated all they did. Vern White was in charge of the maintenance. He kept the staff on task. The custodians also helped the cooks by sweeping and washing the commons area and cafeteria annex. The cooks and the custodians really meant a great deal to the school. They did all of this to keep Wawasee a happy, clean place.

Talking with a new accent!

The foreign language department had four teachers for Spanish, French, and German, and each language was offered up to level five. The French students in third and fourth year went to Fort Wayne on December 11, 1993, to see The Little Prince performed. The language department's hallway was decorated for the festival of Mardi Gras, which is a celebration right before Lent, or 40 days before Easter. All three languages participated in exchanges. The Spanish department hosted a teacher exchange with 15 Costa Rican teachers for three weeks in January. Fourteen German exchange students arrived on March 19 to visit and were scheduled into a variety of classes. On May 3, 24 French students from Lycee Jacques Monod arrived.

Studying society

During the first semester, the social science department had a student teacher from Ball State University. Her name was Miss Irvine, and she taught U.S. history to the juniors with Mr. Van Drie. The fall election brought a state senator, Republican Robert Meeks, to Wawasee. He opened the annual convention with the keynote speech. The Republicans, Eric Speicher and Jenny Fouts, won with 62% of the votes. Dan Duncan and Kelly McClintick, representing the Democrats, put up a good fight and ended with 38% of the votes. Mr. Jeff Van Drie, Mr. Ron Corson, and Mrs. Julie Baird all headed the Model United Nations (MUN). The group traveled to Chicago, Kalamazoo, and Hope College in Michigan for their competitions.

Cooking to survive

The home ec department taught high school students how to survive as adults in a home environment. Many classes were available. Foods I touched on all the cooking basics while Foods II planned full meals and explored more complex cooking methods. The sewing class made a clothing item and some crafts. Family relations helped students understand family life and relationships. The child development classes learned how to care for children. This was the group that escorted toddlers for a day in the building. An interior design class was also offered. There was a boost in foods enrollment. According to Mrs. Leach, there had to be another Foods I class added to accommodate all the students who signed up.

Keeping up with changing technology

The secretarial staff enjoyed the new technology. Mrs. Bultemeier in guidance worked with the students' grades and records on the computer. Third nine weeks teachers sent their grades to guidance using the network for the first time. Mrs. Bruch kept busy in the attendance office, especially with the new nine day rule. The computer helped to keep all of the students' attendance records. The nurses were also very busy using their computer to keep the student body's medical information. Mrs. Christoffel worked with the new technology also. She was in charge of educating and supervising the students who worked in the TV production studio. The studio was used once a week for live or taped morning announcements and every afternoon for written announcements on the TV monitors in each room. Mrs. Whetten stayed busy this year with ticket sales, schedules, and with athletic accounts for each sport. The new technology and additional space was further utilized by the secretaries, nurses, and aides.

Future opportunities

The vocational department offered many opportunities for students preparing for their future. Wawasee students had six different areas to choose from. Two of these were offered at different schools: Cosmetology I and II at Fairfield High School and graphics at East Noble High School. Students staying at WHS could take building trades and work on the house being built in Country Cove. Also available was Auto Mechanics I and II where students worked on automobiles under supervision. In agriculture placement programs the students worked in ag-related and farm businesses. The secretarial office lab program was designed to give students the feel of an office atmosphere.

Experimenting around

The science classes offered were physical science, required for freshmen; Biology I, required for sophomores; Biology II, Chemistry I and II, human physiology and anatomy, genetics, and physics were all electives. Mrs. Schumm had this to say about the other members of the science department, "We just aren't a 'bubbly' group. We all work together well and have a good time!" Since the science department was linked into the computer network, students were able to study for tests in the computer labs. Then the student could print out the results to the test. All science students benefitted greatly by being able to experiment around on the computers and in class.

Working with the arts of industry

The industrial arts classes offered several types of construction and machinery courses. These included construction, cabinet making, furniture making, machine shops, welding, computer numerical control, communications, and CAD (computer aided design). The construction classes were a prerequisite for building trades. They taught students to use the equipment properly and efficiently. Machine shop was the machining of metals into various products. Computer numerical control was controlling a machine with a computer. The communications class included photography, radio, and T.V. production. Computer aided design (CAD) used a computer and monitor to do what used to be done with a table, paper, and pencil. The object drawn was then fed to a plotter which drew the object designed with the computer onto a piece of paper. Much of industry had replaced drawing tables with CAD systems. Robotics became a very important part of industry. The industrial arts class had two robots that were used to instruct students in their use.

Students helping students in the LRC

Mr. Guinther and Mrs. Thomas did a good job of helping students find information in the LRC. They had an increased number of student helpers who were taught well. These helpers knew where things were located and helped the LRC staff shelf books, run copies, and check books in and out. Wawasee students used the LRC constantly for research papers and other assignments. The card catalog became computerized and MAS was available on all the computers in the LRC. The increased size of the library allowed several classes of students to use the facility at one time. The library staff and their student helpers were always around to help.

Audio visual production was instructed by Mrs. Christoffel. With a little training, she taught herself to use the production equipment. She did this by reading manuals, watching other production studios at other high schools, and working very hard. Her equipment was company installed, and they only gave her a 30 hour course on how to use the equipment. Her favorite part was writing the script and putting the production together for the school news. It was Mrs. Christoffel and her assistants who put the school news on the TV and broadcast it live. Her goal was to go to production seminars and learn more to make the audio visual production studio just like a professional studio. She wanted to give special recognition to senior leaders Jamie VanLue and Aaron Graham; and underclassmen Jamie Farber, Ben Plikerd, Joe Moyer, and Chris Lusso.

The administration team was always there when needed. The team consisted of Mr. Fox, Mr. Lobsiger, Mr. Traviolia, Mr. Mitz, and Mrs. Huber. Mrs. Huber's job of vocational director was to keep the co-op running smoothly. The co-op was made up of the three schools of Wawasee, West Noble, and Fairfield. Mr. Mitz, the dean of students, worked in the areas of discipline and attendance. Mr. Fox, as principal, made sure all board policy was carried out and made proposed curriculum changes to the school board. Mr. Lobsiger as vice-principal was in charge finances, keeping the bills paid, and textbook rental fees. Mr. Traviolia as athletic director made sure all the athletic activities went smoothly.

Looking ahead

Once again the guidance office was busy with ISTEP and the PSAT tests. They also spent time registering new students, working with schedules and helping upperclassmen plan for their futures. The guidance office had many student helpers who ran errands, answered phones, delivered passes, and helped with the tasks for the guidance office. In keeping with the ever changing technology of the school, the teachers sent their grades to the guidance office on the network third nine weeks for the first time. This was Mrs. Curtis' last year as guidance director. She was retiring after 15 years at WHS and 34 years in education. Everyone wished her a happy retirement.

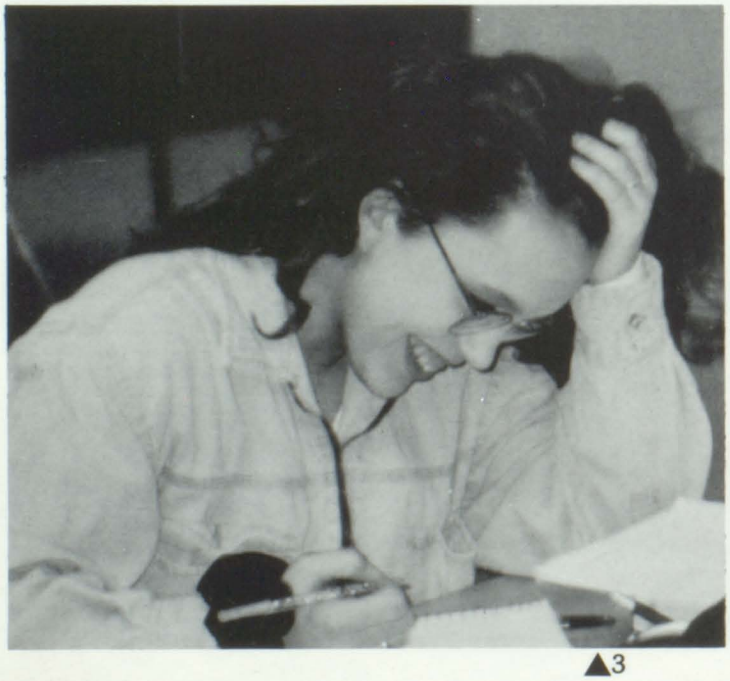

Special needs was a class that helped emotionally or mentally handicapped students with language, reading, and expressing themselves. The classes were to help these students be more successful, help them overcome their disabilities, show them how homework was done and teach them different ways to succeed in regular classes. They even had a field trip to Glenbrook Mall to go Christmas shopping and learn to spend their money wisely. Mr. Berg taught math and health; Mrs. Linky taught English; and Mrs. Wolfe taught government, econ, and intro to exceptional students. Special needs also instituted a new class called peer tutoring. Students signed up to receive training to tutor their peers. They were then placed with students who needed one-on-one help with specific subjects.

Fore!

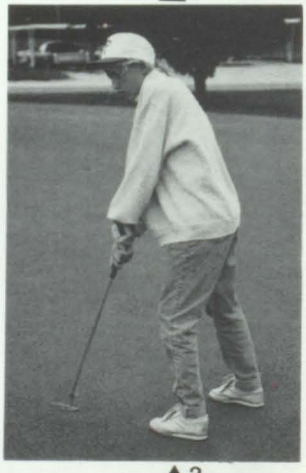

The Wawasee girls' golf team had a tough season with a record of 11-8. Returning players were Segran Bricker, Liz Brunner, Robynne Conn, Tonya Dewart, Amber Esenwein, Rebecca Glaser, Amy Ray, and Mia Rinehold. Their season was a seemingly short one, but this was deceptive. The girls started practicing in August, before school even began. Their season consisted of 19 matches. Each one of the team members turned in personal bests for at least one match. During each match there was a low medalist named and personal bests were cited. The coach was Mr. Bill Lantz, who encouraged each of the girls to lower her individual scores. Through a lot of effort, hard work, determination, and team work, the girls worked together and showed many improvements. The MVP was once again Amber Esenwein, having been selected the MVP for the fourth year in a row; she also received Fewest Putts. The regional qualifier was Amy Ray. Liz Brunner was awarded Most Improved, and the Coaches' Award was given to Michelle Fisher.

These Warriors never quit

The Wawasee varsity football team ended its season with a record of 2-8. The players had many strong points, but their greatest strength was a willingness to try again after defeat. The varsity team showed great improvement by the end of the season and gave 100% on and off the field. Gene Mitz, the new head coach, said, "The sectional game against Plymouth was a big mental boost for the players for next year." Award winners were Joe Salazar, MVP; Orlando Vallejo, Offensive Award; Chris Huffer, Defensive Award; Branden Beatty, Scout Team Award; Don Brown, Coaches' Award; Keith Galloway, Academic Award; James Fischer, Special Teams Award. The captains of the team were Bethany Cockburn and Jamie Emmert. Junior Bethany Cockburn stated, "This season was a rebuilding one for the team with the addition of the freshmen. They did a very good job this season for the team." Awards were presented to junior Jamie Emmert, MVP and Low Point; freshman Aubrey Coy, Runner-Up Low Point Award.

You've gotta' swing to win

The boys' tennis team, tiny but mighty, ended their season with a record of 8-8. Even though the team was about half its normal size, they proved that it didn't matter by pulling off an IHSAA Sectional Championship at Warsaw. Their last sectional win was in 1991. Coaches Al McDowell and Bonnie McDowell led the team to an impressive season. Coach McDowell had plenty of experience, 35 years, coaching at local colleges and high schools. Varsity team members Justin Ward and Jim Scarbeary won first round singles at NLC. Justin Ward and Mike Pickett came the closest to going to state, but fell a little short at regionals. Justin Ward finished off an impressive season being named All Conference. Junior varsity positions were alternated often. At number one singles was Mike Pickett; number two, Nick Baker; number three, Miles Wagoner; and junior varsity positions doubles, Zach Boren and Mark Linebach. Another good year

The Warrior basketball team had a tough act to follow to compare with last year's basketball team. Four of the varsity starters from last year graduated, so there were many new faces on this year's varsity team. The varsity team met the challenge and finished the season with a 13 and 9 record. Although Wawasee did not win the NLC title again this year, they were preparing for next year. " We did a fine job with the varsity team this year and are looking forward to next year," said Coach Gary Goshert. The junior varsity team finished with a record of 5 and 15. The freshman team had a fine season, finishing with a record of 10 and 7. The award winners were Jim Scarbeary, Rebounds; Clint Beasley, Assists; Vince Beasley, Field Goals; Justin Ward, Free Throws; Tony Holterman, Persistence, Hustle, Desire; Eric Speicher, Coaches' Award; Justin Ward, Defensive Points Award; P.J. Sparks of enthusiasm

The cheerleaders brought a great deal of enthusiasm to the Wawasee fans. They did this with the help of the male lifters. Those were the guys who tossed the girls up in the air, caught them, and cheered along with the crowd. Both groups really got the crowd going at all of the sporting events. There were three separate squads: the freshman squad, the junior varsity squad, and the varsity squad. The cheerleaders also had senior Steve Stokes as the Warrior. There were awards presented at the awards banquet to the cheerleaders who were cheerleaders for four years. Three cheerleaders received blankets for this: Carmen Waldrop, Colleen Hoffert, and Trischa Speicher.

Many of these dealt with improvements to the dances and organizations of the SRC. Members also censored videos for lunch. They continued to promote recycling. The members that signed up for the next tournament went every Saturday. The debate team traveled to Columbia City to watch a debate and traveled to Indy to learn the main points of debating. There were eleven different categories that the students could choose from in the speech tournaments. The first member to place was Troy Wuthrich, receiving fifth place in Impromptu at the Plymouth speech tournament. After placing at sectionals, Sarah Detwiler in Discussion and Emily Clark in Impromptu went on to regionals. At the drama club meetings club members discussed possible plays and musicals for presentation. Some of the meetings were also used to sign up for tech jobs for the shows or to brainstorm new ideas for the club's agenda. This year the club was instrumental in staging the fall drama production Anne of Green Gables and the spring musical The Wizard of Oz. A May children's play was also a possibility if the elementary schools wished to have one. The officers were Chris Lung, president; Caroline Weiss, vice-president; and Teresa Maresh, secretary/treasurer. Mrs. Thornburg, the drama club sponsor, directed the musical and assisted Miss. Wooldridge with the drama. "This year we did some really super work on and behind the stage! We did major clean up of the backstage area in the fall, and our next task is to re-do the costume rooms. I am very, very proud of the productions, especially the musical. I was particularly moved by the standing ovation the cast received, as well as the talent and hard work displayed by all," stated Mrs. Thornburg.

DECA sends two to nationals

Wawasee's Distributive Education Club of America, or DECA, had a very successful year. There were 14 members, with officers Ken Thompson, president; Jason Barthel, vice-president; Brandy Kozon, secretary; Christy Spurling, reporter. The DECA club competed in a district contest held at Scottsdale Mall in South Bend. Members who placed were Ken Thompson, first in general merchandising; Jason Barthel, second in retail merchandising; Nicole Scherer, third in restaurant quick serve; and Christy Spurling, fourth in credit and financing. Ken, Jason, Christy, and Nicole all advanced to state contest in Indianapolis. Mike Karr also went as a voting delegate. Each individual contest had 3 sub divisions. In general merchandising, there was a written test, simulation of selling credit, and the creation of an advertisement. Ken Thompson scored over 85% on the written test and took second in advertising, but did not place in the top 10 overall. Retail marketing also had a written test, simulation of selling and the creation of an advertisement. Jason Barthel scored over 85% on his test and took a first in sales and 7th overall. Ken and Jason attended The national DECA contest in Detroit, Michigan, and Windsor, Canada, on April 22-27. Ken went as a representative for the state of Indiana. Jason went to compete in retail marketing. In December DECA also operated a toy drive for children. It was very successful; over $500 in toys was raised. Other activities included going to Potato Creek, selling entertainment books, and selling candy in the bookstore.

Camera ready copy

There were fifteen students that made up the yearbook staff. The group took a trip to St. Francis at the beginning of October along with many other yearbook staffs from various parts of Indiana for a workshop. They went to different classes throughout the day to learn how to put the yearbook together. The yearbook staff also collected money for ads in the Milford, Syracuse, and North Webster areas. The money for the ads was used to help reduce the cost of the book. The staff typed all the body copy and the idents into the computer. For the first time camera ready copy was sent to the company using MS works on the network and the laser printer. Students also had to crop the pictures and finish the layouts before deadline. In all, the yearbook staff worked very hard to make a yearbook that would help students remember a great year.

Newspaper enlarges

The newspaper staff kept very busy. There were ten people on the staff. This was one of the smallest numbers ever on the newspaper staff, but they still produced some of the biggest newspapers, up to twelve pages. In November the staff took a trip to Notre Dame to learn new techniques in constructing the newspaper.

Newspaper staffs from other schools in Indiana participated also. The editor was Laura Nickels; assistant editor, Ruth Craig; and the advisor, Joel Robbins. Together the newspaper staff worked to inform the school of upcoming events and other stories of student interest.

The officers were Stephanie Junghans, and Jennifer Teghtmeyer, co-presidents; Cori Northrup, secretary. The senior members included Stephanie Junghans and Maria DelaFuente. Proudly jazzing it up

The Wawasee jazz band was a very unique group. They managed to make it to every home basketball game to keep the Hardwood Teepee alive with Warrior spirit. They also performed at all the pep rallies and kept the atmosphere alive. Not only did they perform for the school, but they also participated in jazz band contests, coming out on top. They were under new direction this year. Mr. Clark was their new band director, moving to WHS from Whitko. There was a new distinction between junior varsity and varsity jazz band. The junior varsity jazz band played at the junior varsity basketball games. The varsity played for the varsity games. Also during the varsity games, the jazz band was joined by members of the adult community band. Our jazz band had a lot to be proud of.

Big Mouth opens wide

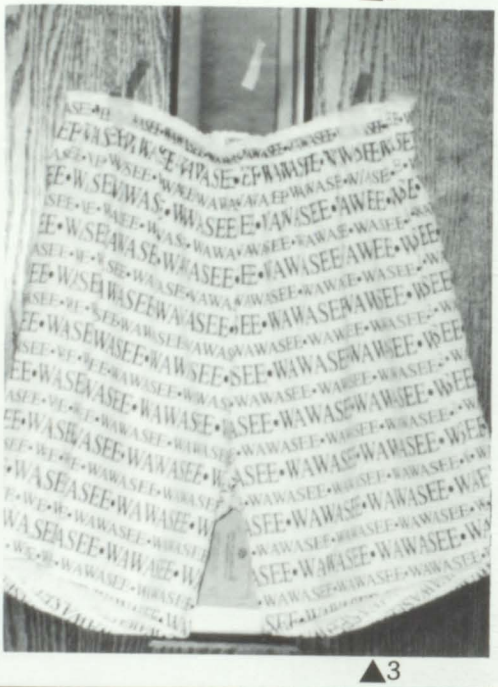

This was the first year for the spirit club Big Mouth. It evolved from SRC's desire to support all WHS athletes. The Big Mouth club made signs to boost team spirit and posted them around the building. They ordered boxer shorts that had Wawasee printed all over them and also ordered T-shirts. They also had weekly prizes of free candy and Cokes for members at the basketball games. Big Mouth members hoped that more members and activities would eventually come for the club.

Cleaning it up!

This was the first year for the environmental club. Each teacher had a plastic container where teachers and students deposited white paper to be recycled. Every Tuesday morning the environmental club went from room to room picking up the paper. After all of the paper was collected, they took it to a recycling center in Rochester. They also recycled cans and took them to Park Pharmacy. The club's goal was to make the world a cleaner place to live.

The Legend

The construction of the yearbook is always a complicated process. This yearbook contained 208 pages, sold for $23 a copy, and published 500 copies. The book had a pigskin antique green cover with a metallic gold stamp, designed by the company. Eighty pound Bordeaux glossy paper was used for the arial type face, which was sent to the Herff Jones plant in Shawnee Mission, Kansas. The contract price to Herff Jones was $14,975. Greg Hiner, Cyndee VonBlon and Cory Young were the photographers for the book as well as the individual staff members. Fred Henderson, was the company representative for Herff Jones.

Leave With the Memories

We knew our days here were numbered,
Yet we took them all for granted.
We will never have back the innocence
And security these walls held for us.
It is time for us to take our places among those
Who have gone before us into the real world.
It is time to put to use all that was taught to us here.
As we look back on the years,
Remember the times we shared together.
As we part, remember the faces that influenced our lives.
Let us go our different directions
And do our part in this world
Because we will never really be separated
As long as hearts and memories exist.
