Warriors show their school spirit.

Homecoming 2002 was another success for Wawasee High School. Underclassman court members were freshmen, Whitney Hooley and Michael Conrad; sophomores, Carly Murphy and Jordan Swain; juniors, Libby Brown and Luke Stoffel. The juniors started off the week well after beating the seniors and the sophomores to capture the powder puff championship, while the seniors ended up in last place. The freshmen came away with a win in an unusual and eventful taco-eating contest. The talent show proved to be an exciting night and the turning point for the senior class of 2003 as they came away with their first victory of the week. The talent show displayed various musical acts with guitars, violins, and even buckets along with the class skits. The class competition was close, with the juniors only leading by two points at midweek. The junior class was bombarded with silver money in the penny pitch race and finished with $-26. The seniors finished in first-place followed by the freshmen and sophomores. The combined amount from all grades was the most ever received in the history of the race with $1,244.52. The final night arrived and the grades displayed their creative floats during the half time show of the game, where the seniors again received a first-place finish. Results were combined for an overall winner for the week. The seniors came out on top followed by the juniors, and a tie between the sophomores and freshmen. The homecoming king and queen votes were tallied and Jessica Leach and Drew Evans were the winners. The Warrior football team had a tough time with Goshen after scoring the first touchdown and eventually fell to the Redskins by a score of 29-13.

Academic teams focus on the Middle Ages.

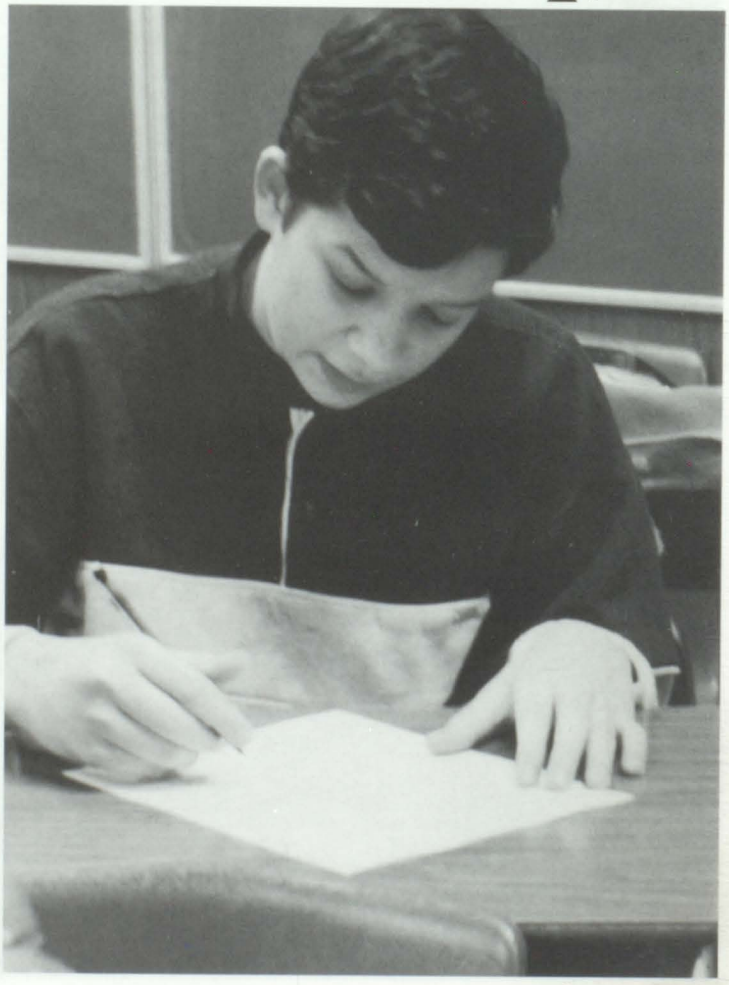

The topic for the academic teams was The Middle Ages. The six teams had to study all the aspects of the 13th, 14th and 15th centuries. There were 5 different teams who competed consisting of math, science, social science, English, and fine arts. Team members competed in their category against other high school students to see who understood the material and could grasp the concept of what they had been reading or studying. The team sponsors were Mrs. Harris for math, Mrs. Holsopple for science, Mrs. Myers for social science, Mr. Waltz for English and Mrs. Hursh for fine arts. The Academic teams competed at three different meets. They compete on March 6th, March 13th, and April 22nd. At the regional competition the math team placed first. Their score was the third highest in the state, and they advanced to state competition on May 10.

The foreign students make huge moves

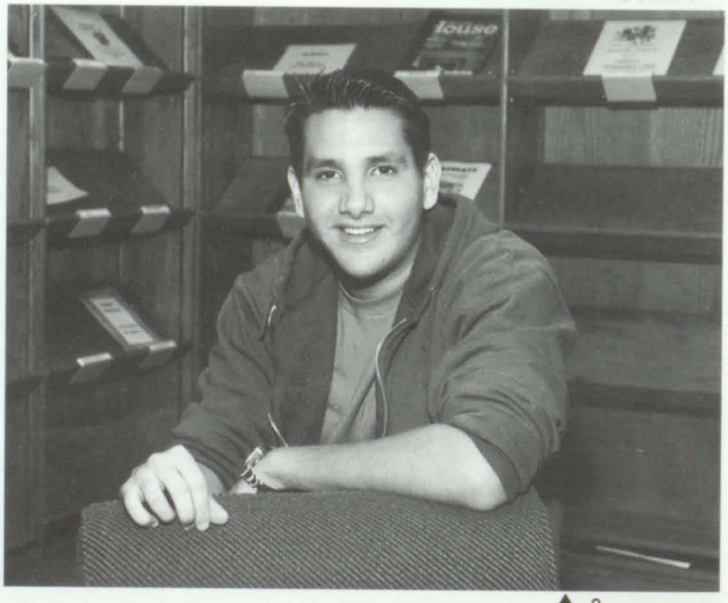

There were six foreign exchange students at WHS. They came from all over the world ranging from Brazil to Ecuador to Switzerland, Germany and Thailand. Bet you saw these new people in school and wondered who they were. The students were here from July on. Some left in January and some stayed until the end of the school year. Most of the exchange students said the hardest part about coming to America was the weather and getting used to it. The number one food that most everyone liked was pizza followed by chicken nuggets and desserts. One of the other main differences in coming to America was Syracuse, North Webster and Milford were smaller than their hometowns. They also had to get used to the way the language sounded when spoken by Americans. The students also said that our school had more diversity and was not as strict. " The technology is better and there is more comfort in America," said Marcel Garcia.

Students have many opinions on Trimesters.

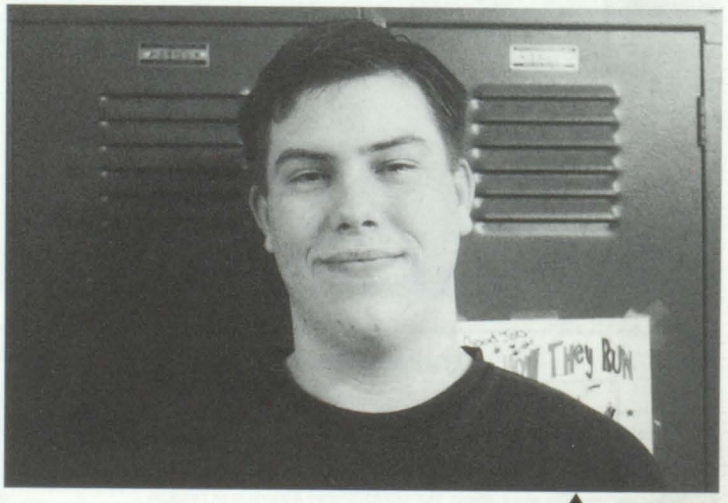

The trimesters received a lot of mixed feelings. The classes seemed to go faster when the teachers had more time to spend on one subject instead of switching so fast. The high school switched to trimesters for the first time. Instead of 7 classes at 55 minutes, students had 5 classes at 68 minutes. During the semester format the students had 5 minutes between each class. In trimesters there were 7 minutes with a one-minute warning bell, making it easier to get to class on time. The school year consisted of 3 twelve week trimesters with midterms every six-weeks. With only 5 classes, athletes and extra-curricular students could only have one F; if the students only had 4 classes with a study hall, he/she had to be passing all four. The athletes' eligibility was checked every 6 weeks, more often than every 9 weeks. With having the trimesters, students had more of a variety of class choices. That left more time for electives if they chose to do so.

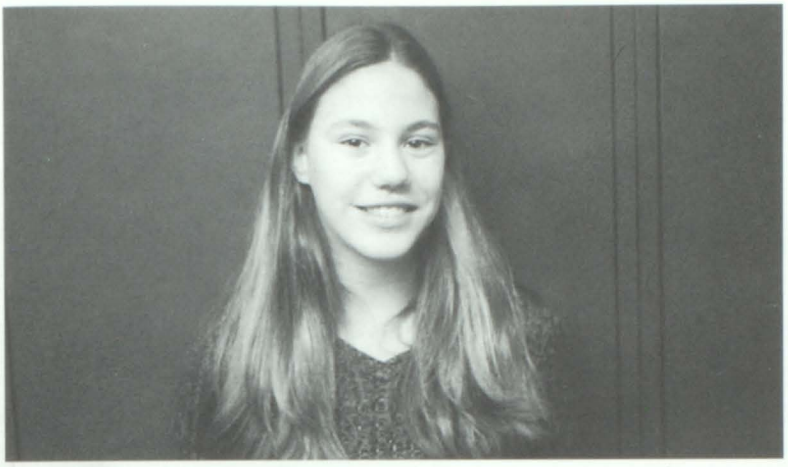

Junior Haley Bird: "I like the trimesters because I don't have as much homework as I did when we had seven classes."

Senior Zach Koher:" I don't like the trimester because the teachers lecture the entire 70 minutes instead of just 50 like last year."

Junior Stephen Mahan: "The trimesters give you more variety through out the year. They are better; they keep things interesting."

Sophomore Kelsy Finkenbiner: " The trimesters are ok. I don't want to switch classes every 12 weeks. The classes are a lot longer, but I do like the 7 minute passing periods."

Sophomore Will Ernest: " They are cool; not as many classes, not as much homework.

Senior Katie Gregory: " I think the trimesters are confusing. I like them because you can get in more classes, but I don't like the 70 minute classes."

Freshman Nichol Sexton; " I like them; they are fun."

Freshman Becky Searer: " I like them; you get more credits."

See How They Run gets laughs.

The fall production for 2002 was See How They Run. The show was successfully performed on November 8, 9, and 10. It was a three-act play with one-dimensional characters, absurd plot twists, contrived meetings of long lost friends, false identities, and the airy acceptance of the irrational. The Rev. Lionel and Penelope Toop lived in the manse of their church. The young minister was concerned about his wife's reputation in their small English village during the late 1940; she was an ex-American actress that wore TROUSERS! There was also a disgruntled spinster who indulged a bit too much in the cooking sherry, a visiting Bishop, an American soldier, a cockney maid, confused vicar, and an escaped prisoner. "It is the most hilarious play I've ever seen; that's why it is my favorite!" commented Mrs. Moss. The student directors and stage construction manager worked hard to bring the production together and received great gratitude. "Each year we worry if we'll get the 'right kids' and every year the shows continue the tradition of excellence," stated the directors.

Wawasee gets dancing fever from Music Man.

The spring musical was the Music Man and had a sixty-nine member cast. The students performed on March 20, 21, and 22 during winter break. The cast included both high school students and young children from the Wawasee area. It was 2-act play that displayed the musical, acting, and dancing talents of the students. The rollicking musical followed the fast-talking Professor Harold Hill (Forrest Boesenberg) in River City, Iowa, in 1912, as he mesmerized the citizens with the need for a boys' marching band to keep their children on the path to moral righteousness. He tried to get the parents to enroll their kids in his music training program called "The Think System" to turn them into magnificent performers. But not all the townspeople fell for the scheme, especially Marian Paroo (Kara Judy), the beautiful, local librarian and piano teacher who had caught Professor Hill's eye. The musical was highlighted by classic hits such as "Trouble," "Seventy-Six Trombones," and "Gary, Indiana." Junior backstage crewmember Nicole Ward commented, "Watching the play from behind the scenes was fun, and I loved being involved with the play!"

The administration plans for the future.

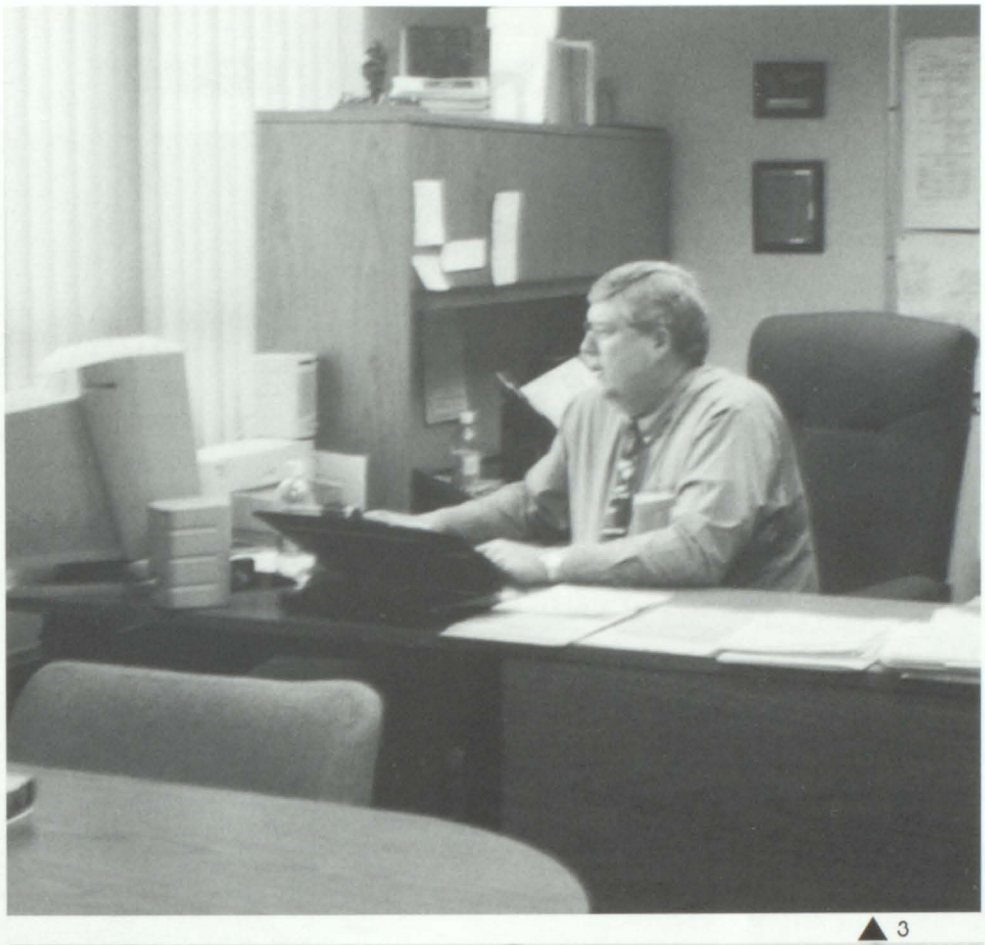

The administration consisted of Mr. Frank, Mr. Matz, Mr. Ringler and Mrs. Hurley. Mr. Frank managed total operations of the high school and more specifically he was directly in charge of instruction and curriculum. Mr. Matz managed day- to - day operations of the building. He managed the budget, facility usage, maintenance, special schedules, after school use of the auditorium, and non-athletic extracurricular events. Mr. Ringler was in charge of discipline and attendance. Mrs. Hurley was in charge of all the athletic events. Mr. Frank had many comments on the new trimester schedules. He stated, "I think it is more good than bad. It gave us more opportunities to get students in the workplace. Fewer students were failing classes than the past years. It also allowed teachers and students more time to focus on learning material and being able to use what they learned instead of quickly trying to memorize information just for the grade then forgetting it. We have done all this and still have maintained our standard ISTEP scores."

The art classes create modern masterpieces.

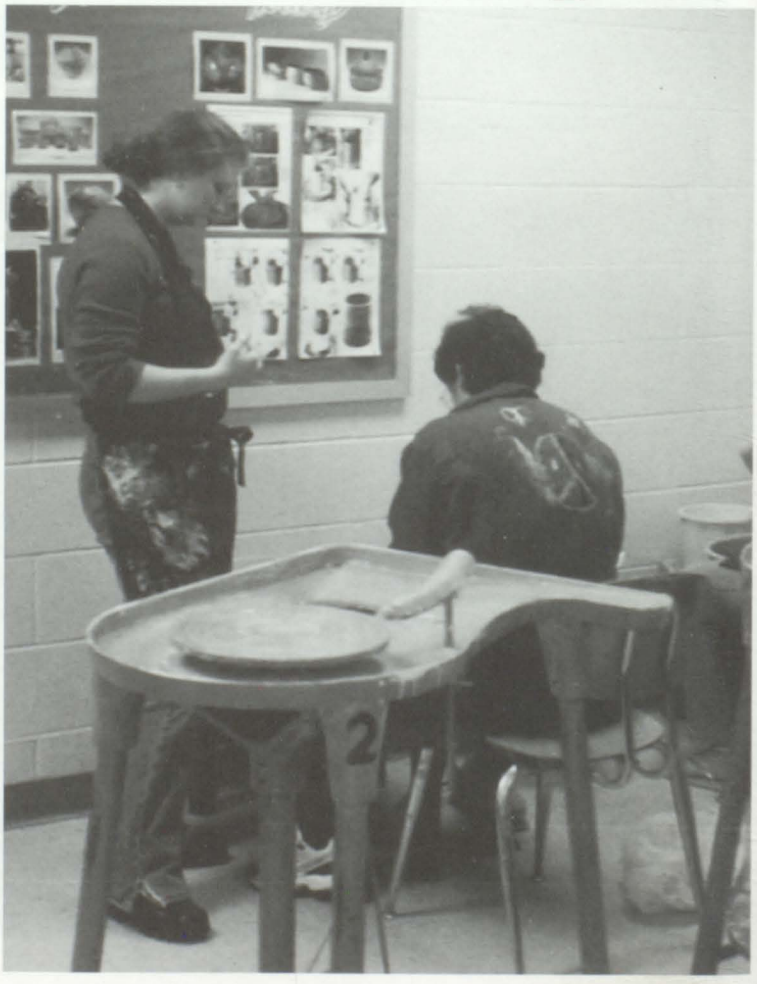

The art teachers were Mrs. Bryan and Mr. Eby. There were various art classes to pick from including ceramics, drawing, computer graphics, and photography. The students found the classes fun and exciting. They were able to express their creative side. Both Mrs. Bryan and Mr. Eby found the trimesters an overall positive change for the classes. They had more time to do projects. The longer time allowed for more hands on activities including outside, group, and student work. The teachers could incorporate reading and let students teach some lessons. They were able to be more creative with their ways of teaching the classes. Meghan Lantz and Abbey Blakeslee both liked the longer class time that came with the new trimester schedule. Meghan Lantz said, " Mr. Eby is the coolest teacher ever; I have learned a lot from Mrs. Bryan, and art is cool just like school."

Band gets a new director.

They had a very successful year with their new director. Band was split into two groups for the first time. There were advanced and intermediate bands. Advanced consisted of juniors and seniors, and the intermediate band was freshmen and sophomores. In September and October the marching band was in six different competitions. They made it through district and on to regional. They usually placed in the middle of their class, mostly in second or third places with a low of seventh place at the invitational district at Concord. The theme this year was based on Rodeo by Aaron Copland. The band members also participated in the solo and ensemble contest on February 10th. Trimesters went a lot better than what Mr. Elliot expected; however, it was tough on the intermediate band. Because of the break, students had a hard time keeping on track.

Career technical and business program rises.

The career technical and business department included all business courses as well as the vocational classes offered not only at Wawasee, but also at Fairfield and West Noble. The business technical career program offered hands on experience college credits, state licenses, and certificates of technical achievements and wages through I.C.E. It was a good experience for the student body. As for the future, department chair Mr. Metcalf commented, "There will be a business technical lab added to the curriculum. It will be a one-hour course and last all three trimesters. It is for students seeking to become secretaries and administrative assistants. I want kids to experience training and have job skills before they get out of high school, so then they will have a better idea on what they want to do." Mr. Metcalf also stated that trimesters did not affect the business or vocational department, and it was good for the business department because they were adding new classes.

The choirs sing through another year.

The advanced choir and the beginning choir were large in size. They had some new faces and some returning students. The choirs sang and performed at a variety of places. One of their largest concerts was the Corporation Music Festival, but due to electricity problems at the high school, it was cancelled. Mr. Blackwell, Mrs. Meadows, Mr. Stock, and Mr. Frank made the decision the Friday of the concert to cancel it. The theme for the music festival was "Humor" with the phrase "Make Em Laugh." The choirs put on concerts at the high school as well as other places. One concert at the high school was the pops show held May 9 and 10. The choir worked on their song and dance moves each day to perfect them before the big shows. They also participated in the solo and ensemble contest that was held every year. There were many first place winners and second place winners.

FACS is more than just cooking.

The Family and Consumer Science department had various classes to offer a student. The department had more than just the nutrition classes to choose from. There were also different levels of sewing classes, interior design, and child development. The new trimester scheduling was a blessing for the FACS department. Mrs. Oswald commented, "They're great; they allow for longer lab periods without having to rush to get things done." Mrs. Oswald also liked that the trimesters allowed for more hands-on experiences. She could provide information and then students could practice using the lesson in the same class period. The child development class continued to be a popular course to take among the girls. It allowed them to take a look into the responsibilities that come in starting a family. The students' favorite thing about the class was when they got to bring a young child to school with them for half a day.

What language are you speaking?

The foreign language department had five teachers. There were three Spanish teachers, one French teacher, and one German teacher. One new teacher this year was Miss Czarnecki. The trimester did not affect the teachers that much, but it made them more alert to their students' learning needs and how fast they moved on to new subjects and words. They noticed that the students needed more change in activities during the period and a lot more moving around. The first and second levels of each language were unified since the foreign language teachers rewrote the curriculum. They did not notice a change in the enrollment but are expecting an increase in the future. For the most part the foreign language teachers enjoyed the trimesters and said the 70 minutes were not a problem. The time seemed to fly by and didn't seem to affect the teaching process. The teachers used gesturing, repetition, stories and acting to teach the students their vocabulary words.

Guidance helps students along the way.

The guidance department consisted of Ms. Angle, Mrs. Preheim, and Mr. Hunsberger. Ms. Angle counseled students whose last name started with A-G; Mrs. Preheim helped students H-Q from grades 9- 11, and counseled H-O for the seniors; Mr. Hunsberger helped students R-Z from grades 9-11, and P-Z for the seniors. Trimesters, for these counselors, made it a bit more difficult to schedule students' classes, but with Mr. Frank's and Mrs. Thomas's help on the master scheduling, things were a little less difficult. The counselors spent 25% of their time with student testing such as the ISTEP, Terra Nova, Keys and PSAT. By the end of October, Ms. Angle commented, "We are so excited that fall testing is over with!" The other 75% of their time they were there to help students with future careers, four-year planning, and their grades.

Industrial tech builds for the future.

Industrial technology was an action-based program where students learned how to design and build products that extended their abilities as humans to improve and control the natural human made world. Students who took an industrial tech course benefited from the hands-on, lab- based, action-packed curriculum that allowed them to "learn by doing." Senior students in Mr. Coblentz's fundamentals of engineering class designed two different cars and competed at Race Way Park in Brownsburg, Indiana, in April. The cars were ranked as either regular or unlimited edition. They competed against other schools in a super mileage challenge to see who could get the most miles to the gallon. The driver and the gas tank were weighed and they drove twenty-five laps within a thirty-minute time span. The competition started at eight o'clock in the morning and lasted until three in the afternoon. At the end of the day, teams received awards for many different categories, such as rookie teams, best design, and overall sharpest looking.

Big changes are made in language arts.

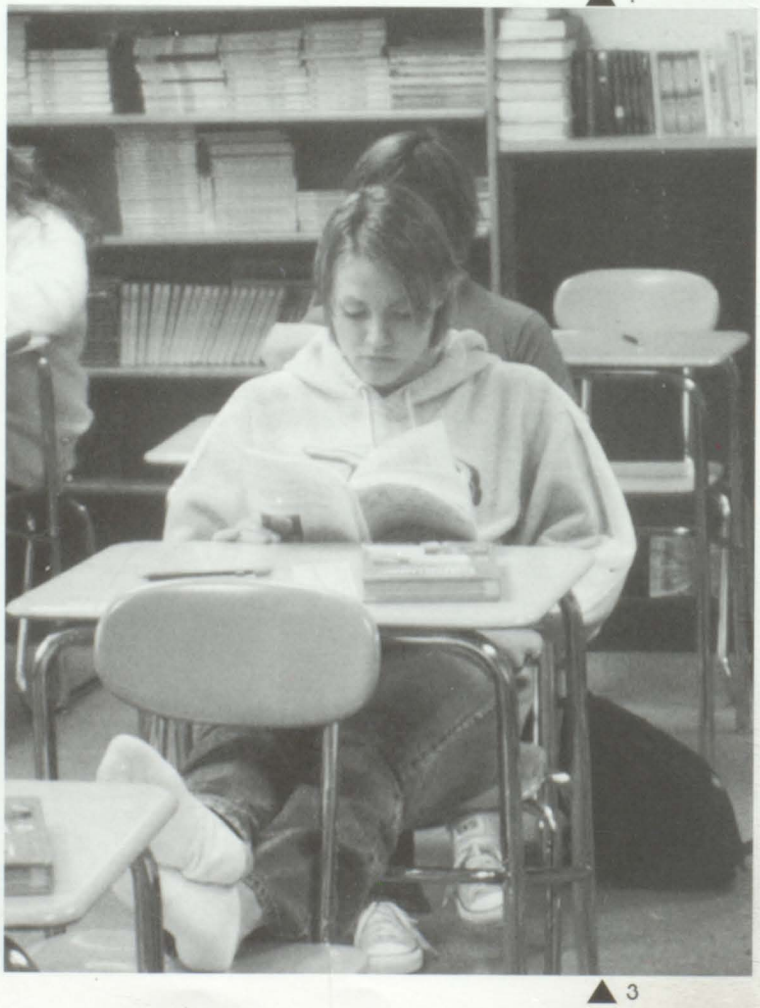

The English department had much changing to do to get ready for the new trimester schedule. "I liked the semesters better with the 7 classes; you got more time to spend on grading and you had shorter periods," said Mr. Schmidt. " We had to cut out some of the curriculum, but at the same time it was better for the students." The English teachers had to move around a great deal of what they did in class in order to make space for the state standards. There were many mixed feeling about the trimesters, not only from the students but also from the teachers. " I liked that fact that we had parent teacher conferences every trimester so we had a chance to meet with all our students' parents," commented Mrs. Kromer, " However, it was hard for a student to make up homework if he missed even one day of school. You don't want to move too fast and hurt the students."

The LRC holds vast knowledge in one room.

The LRC was filled with new and interesting sights. This included two of the Harry Potter books, and many new Stephen King novels. With the help of Mr. Guinther and Mrs. Keifer, students were helped and directed to what they needed or to the source of information that best fit their needs. From the easy to access computers to reliable computer index, students found that the world was at their fingertips.

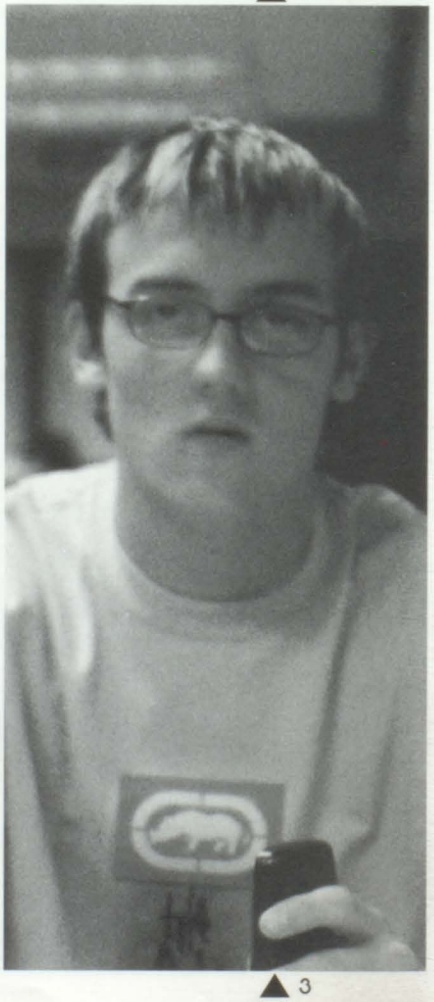

In the production studio, students were given the opportunity to be in the news spotlight. Mrs. White and her crew of ready and willing students were set for action in their new news studio, which fit their needs. Due to the new room, the studio was much quieter, had better lighting, and enjoyed better access to equipment. The addition of new equipment like the new sound equipment and the new light equipment allowed for a much more technically advanced production.

The math teachers keep class interesting.

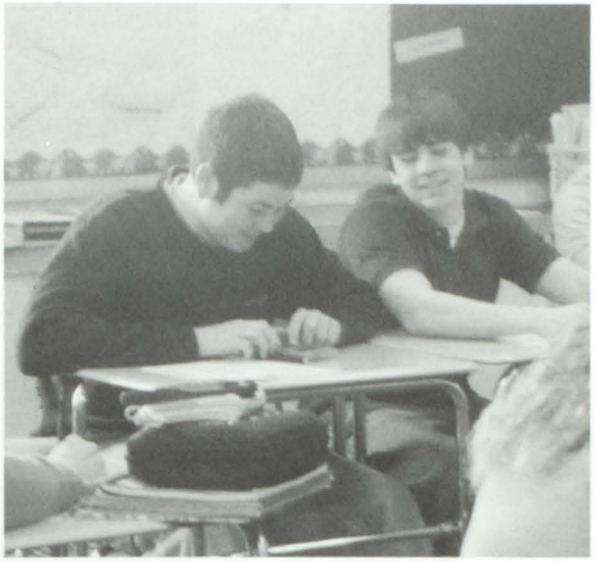

The math department had nine teachers. Mrs. Urfer and Miss Boggs were two new teachers on the staff for the department. Miss Boggs taught the geometry classes and Mrs. Urfer taught some of the algebra classes. The math teachers found trimesters a strain. They had to fit their curriculums into fewer days without overloading the students. Sophomore David Adams liked the trimesters since they didn't have class year round, but felt there needed to be more time to work in class for those students who didn't have a study hall. The teachers tried to split the classes into two and three sections a day with different activities to keep the students interested. Most of the teachers felt the second trimester was the hardest because they had both A and B sections of courses, there were fewer days in that trimester, they dealt with weather interruptions, and it was overall difficult to balance the classes. The freshman students who were on block scheduling the year before liked the 68-minute classes better than 90 minutes, but the upperclassmen wished they still had only 50-minute classes.

Newspaper works with DECA.

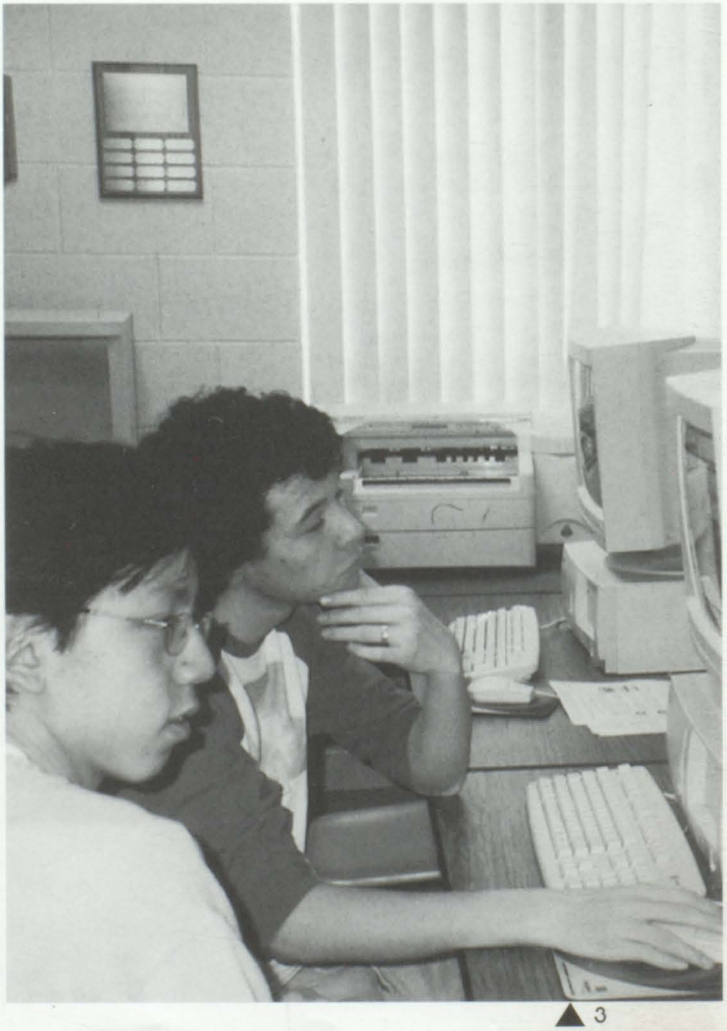

Due to writing stories, keeping up on current events, and laying out the school newspaper, the "Smoke Signals" newspaper staff didn't have much free time. Many students had no clue how much effort went into making the newspaper. It literally called for a team effort. Smoke Signals had six editions, one of them was a literary magazine, with two publications per trimester. With their new partnership with DECA, the staff could raise more money. DECA helped sell some of their ads, so the two groups shared their revenue. With trimesters it was hard to keep a continuous staff. Students had a hard time fitting newspaper into their schedules three times. This was the only real problem with trimester. The core staff was Editor-in-Chief Ryan Cox, cartoonist Jon Davis, and writers Chrissy Kime, and Tim Popenfoose. Mr. Waltz was their sponsor.

Orchestra survives trimesters.

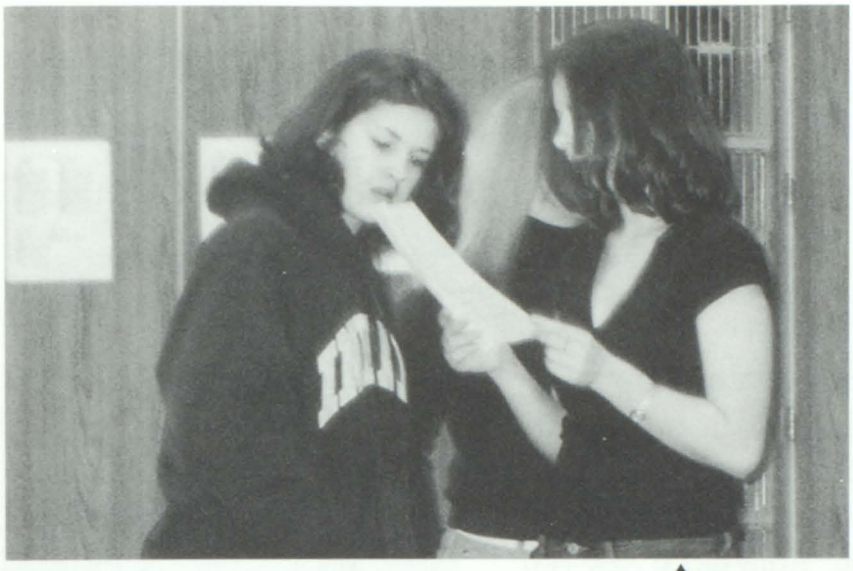

The orchestra program still maintained a good-sized group of students despite the new trimester schedule. Dr. Dubach felt that the trimesters had not helped the program. The students in orchestra had to sign up for all three of the trimesters to participate, which resulted in a lower number of students involved in the program. The Corporation Musical Festival was cancelled due to a temporary power outage that afternoon. The students were disappointed about the cancellation; they had no time to rehearse, and it was impossible to still put on the show. The orchestra program tried to create a combined orchestra at the middle school concerts. The orchestra did put on a spring concert with the other music programs at the high school. The songs played by the orchestra students included "Folk Tune and Fiddle Dance" and "Brandenburg Concert Number 3."

These people help in positive ways.

The secretaries, student aides, nurse, and paraprofessionals helped the school out in many ways. The different secretarial departments included attendance; bookkeeping; guidance; career, technical and business; athletic department; and the main office. Mrs. Bultemeier stated, " In the main office we do a lot of paper work and we answer phone calls. The equipment we have is already in really good shape; I did get a new flat screen monitor!" The school nurse played a big role at Wawasee High School also by taking care of the ill students who needed assistance. Student aides also contributed a great deal. They took over some of the tasks that many of the secretaries might not have had time to complete, whether it was paperwork, answering the phone, or writing passes to students. The paraprofessionals also helped out by assisting teachers. They helped out in special needs, ISTEP remediation, and study halls.

Physical education gets serious about fitness.

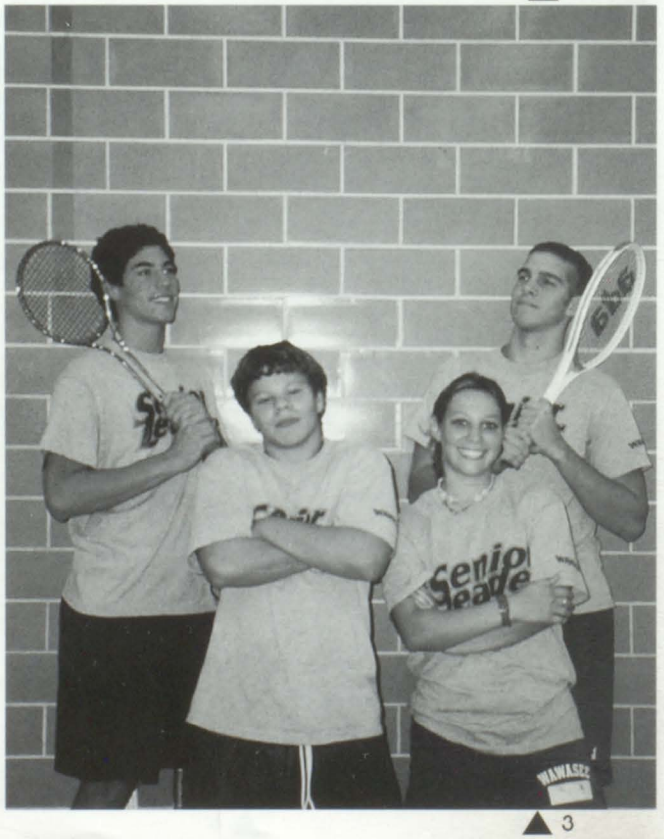

Physical education changed their entire system. They even did away with the triathlon. Their main goal was to increase everybody's fitness level in response to President Bush's comment that teen health was way down and something needed to be done about it. On Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays students had sports day. They had a choice of either team sports or lifetime sports. Team sports were where students could play on teams. Lifetime sports were more individual activities. On Tuesdays and Thursdays students participated i fitness activities such as agility, running, medicine balls, dots, jump rope, and form running. Physical education also received a new entertainment center to use in the winter. Aerobics, Tai-Bo, and Pilates were some of their winter activities. With trimesters in effect, a lot more got done. With only four classes a day, it was easier on the teachers. There was always time for exercises everyday, even time for the five -minute jump rope routines. Also with trimesters freshmen were only required to take one trimester during their freshman year. With these changes, fitness scores improved greatly.

The science department has positive goals.

The science department contained many different curriculums. It included natural science, integrated science, chemistry, physics, biology, human physiology, chemistry, and physics. There were a variety of choices that students could make to meet their educational needs. The trimester classes were sixty-eight minutes long and some teachers' opinions on trimesters varied, depending on the different teacher's curriculum. Mrs. Schumm stated, "I think that trimesters have decreased the time for students to relearn and process the material being learned. However, it has increased time to complete labs and discuss the outcome." As with other departments, one of the positive goals for the science department was to make sure the curriculum was aligned with the state standards. It was very important that the students reached each state standard and the material being presented coincided with the standards.

Dream Company and Vocal Jazz sing proudly.

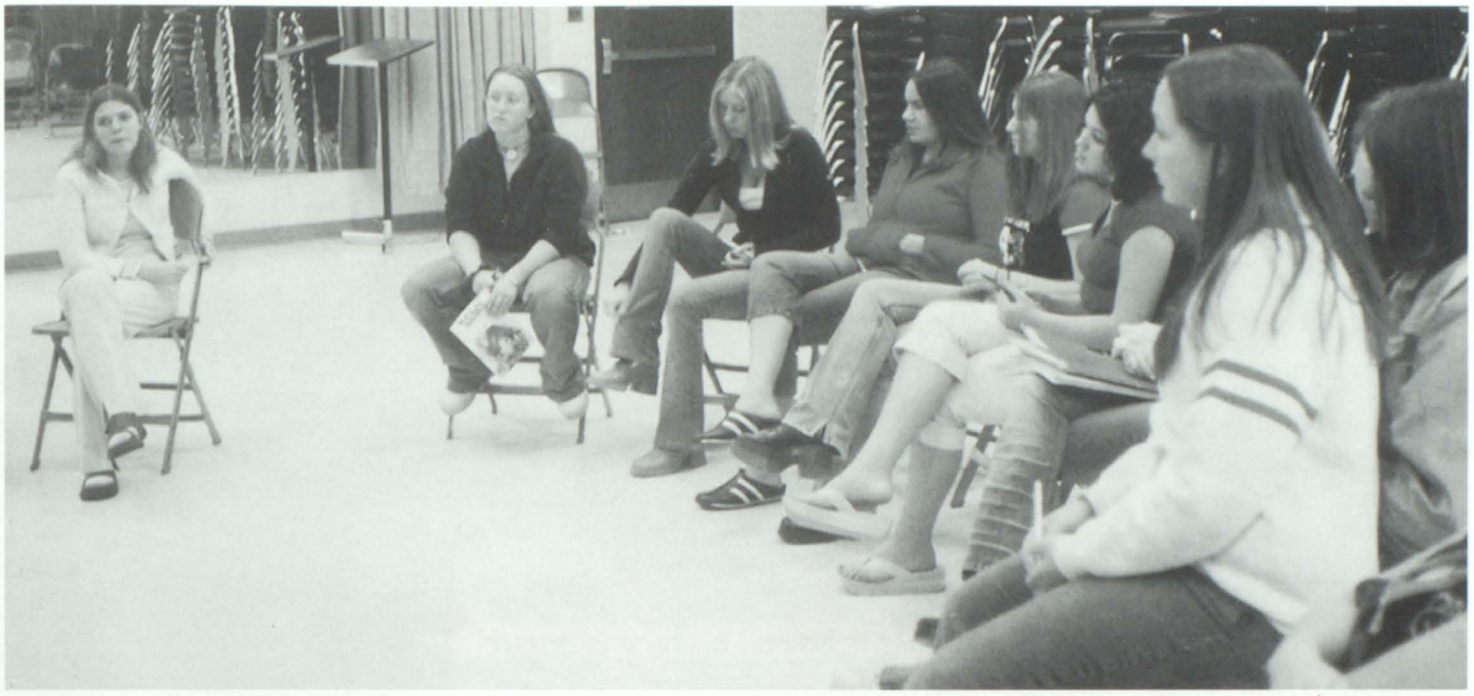

The Dream Company and Vocal Jazz were not like the other choirs. Students had to try out to be in them; they were not just accepted in. Tryouts were strenuous and many people didn't make it. The tryouts could last for quite a while, but they were worth it. Being in Dream Company and Vocal Jazz was an honor. The choirs competed in the solo and ensemble contest and planned to sing in the Corporation Music Festival. Due to electrical problems at the high school, the music festival was cancelled. However, the choirs did put on a pop show. The theme for the pop show was Celebration. "This was the best year for me," said senior Kayla Hall. The music department did not think there was going to be enough time to prepare for a Christmas show because of the trimesters, so there was not a show in December. There were not many differences between these two choirs except the Dream Company was made up of all girls and the Vocal Jazz was mixed with guy and girl partners. Each choir was different, but had consistency in moves and type of music.

Memorize dates? Not in social science.

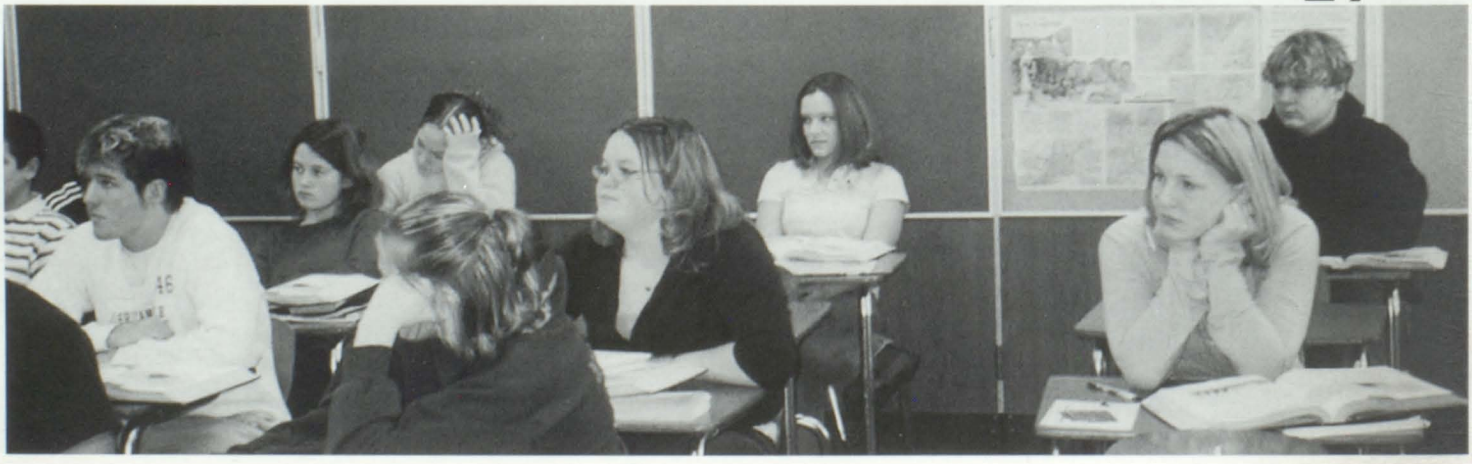

The social science department was more than just history. Economics, psychology, and sociology were also a part of their curriculum, along with U.S and world history, world geography, and government. All of these classes were related to society. According to Mr. Karns, their goal was to "help people figure out where they fit in society, how they can make contributions to society, how they can make it better, how it works and how to make decisions." Mr. Karns also stated that "social science has more to do with understanding society rather than memorizing dates. Actually it has nothing to do with memorizing dates. It drives me crazy when students say all history is about is memorizing dates." Reactions to trimesters varied. Some of the teachers liked trimesters because it gave them more time in class. Others disagreed and said that the adjustment to time was difficult. With sixty-eight minute classes, students were more likely to stop paying attention.

Cooks and custodians work behind the scenes.

The cook and custodial staffs had a busy year trying to keep up with the students and staff. The cooks came in everyday around 8 to start cooking the lunches for both lunch shifts. Most students believed the cooks cooked the food and then went home, but that was only part of the job. They also had to keep refilling the food trays while students were in line so the food didn't run out. Then came the clean up. They cleaned the whole lunchroom and cooking area. They also had to wipe down the tables and seats. The custodians were the staff members most students didn't see. They were usually behind the scenes cleaning up after students. They cleaned all the rooms and fixed things that were broken. There were two shifts for the custodial staff. The nightshift and day shift each had their own jobs. Setting up for the parent teacher conferences three times, the corporation music festival, and graduation were also part of the custodians' responsibilities.

Small staff makes big strides.

Trimesters and the smallest staff ever made for an interesting year for the yearbook class. The yearbook staff was made up of four girls and Mrs. Harkleroad. The staff started the year by calling and meeting with businesses to see if they would like to buy an ad to be placed in the yearbook. The money raised from these efforts was used to pay for yearbook expenses.

Together the staff came up with a puzzle theme to use throughout the book. The staff had to work extra hard to reach its six major deadlines and finish all 208 pages. There were no photographers due to the small number of students, so they had to help each other get pictures and identify the people in them for their layouts. Their biggest deadline was right before spring break, having to finish 60 pages in less than a month's time period. The trimesters were good for the staff. They gave the students a longer time period to work, but it reduced the number of students who were able to participate because they had to enroll for all three trimesters. Despite the obstacles, the staff was able to work as a team and put together a successful yearbook.

No artistic ability needed to join art club.

The art club consisted of many talented and artistic individuals. The president of art club was Kate Rummel; the vice-president, Sarah Snavely; and the secretary, Andrea Strong. This group was a social club and it was open to anyone in school to join. Students did not have to have artistic ability. They could just actually have the desire to do art work and projects. Being in this club allowed students to make many new friends and learn a lot about other people. The art club members had an annual pumpkin carve and a Christmas party. They worked on art related activities throughout the year. Stacey Eierman, Casey Charlton, and Braedon Gerard stated, " Art club was really fun and brought out the best artistic ability in us while meeting new people and making new friends. We encouraged everyone to join if they enjoyed art related projects." This group worked hard on different art related assignments and also had fun at different events.

Chess club competes around the state.

The chess club participated in many events. Mrs. Baird was the sponsor of this group. These talented individuals participated in the regionals for individual players. Stan Strycker was an alternate for this competition. During spring break nine people went to state/team competition. There were not enough high school chess teams around this area so they got to go straight to state. Students had the opportunity to go to grade level championships where the individual competed against someone in his grade only. On May 3rd, there was an Elkhart Scholastic Tournament that the chess club participated in. In this tournament the chess players had to have the same ranking or similar ranking as another person to play him. These chess activities and competitions took a lot of concentration but also were a lot of fun if the student knew how to play the game correctly. Anyone was welcome to join chess club. A person did not have to be good at chess club to join because he could learn how to improve throughout the year.

DECA competes at state.

DECA was a marketing organization that taught different marketing strategies. DECA put students in business situations to show them what it was like in the real world. To be in DECA a student should have been involved in a business class or marketing class or have a desire to choose something in a business career area. DECA attended competitions in South Bend and Indianapolis. The regional was held at South Bend and 22 students advanced on to state. The state contest was held in Indianapolis. At the competitions the students competed in skits that were set up by the judges to see how well they would react to that kind of situation. The state competition lasted 3 days. " You might only be in 2 or 3 skits; then you could go shopping and eat," stated President Gretchen Heil. " Being in DECA was a lot of fun. I think it was a great experience." President for the DECA club was Gretchen Heil; vice-president, Dannie Goldenberg. The sponsors were Mr.Schutz and Mrs. White.

Drama Club does more than plays and musicals.

The drama club had an exciting year. From the musicals to the plays and movie nights, there wasn't much time for anything else. The drama club hosted the 2 school plays and went to see a few of their own. "We encouraged everyone to join drama club," said Kara Judy. " Get involved so you can earn your thespian points. I was the lead in the musical. I never would have gotten the chance if I had not joined the drama club. It was a great experience." The drama club had holiday related movie nights. They watched movies for Halloween, Christmas and Valentine's Day. The president for drama club was Lydia Shoemaker; vice-president, Kara Judy; the secretary and treasurer, Rachel Wear. There were many members and people behind the scenes besides the actors who helped out with the plays and musicals. Senior Katie Gregory stated," Drama club was a place where people could be themselves and not worry about being made fun of. It was a place where you could make some really strong friendships with people that loved theater as much as you. It was a very welcoming group of people."

FFA auctions off members.

"It was not all farming stuff; it was more leadership and speaking skills," mentioned senior and vice-president Katie Darr. FFA (Future Farmers of America) not only concentrated on farm life, but also entered a variety of agriculturally related contests. Wawasee also hosted the district leadership contests for area schools. In April members of FFA were auctioned off to work for eight hours for the person in the community who bought them. This was a fundraiser for the club, and also the student who was auctioned off received 25% of what he/she was sold for. The students were bought for anywhere from $50-$800. The average bid was between $200-300. Only one student sold for $800. This money was used to pay for all their trips to contests and activities. At the end of the year a banquet was held recognizing people in the community that helped throughout the year. They also had dinner to present scholarships.

Students are curious about teaching careers.

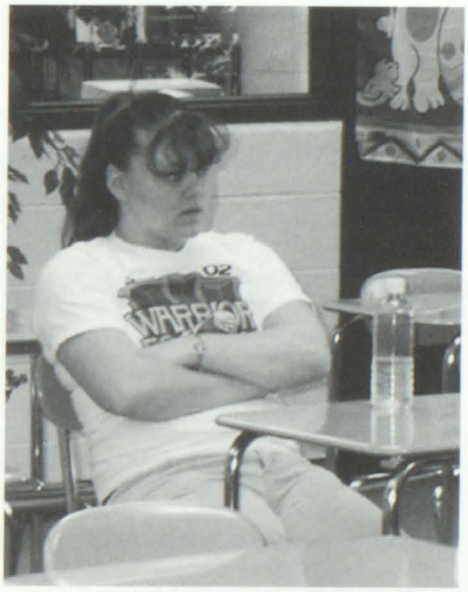

▲ 1

FEA, which stood for Future Educators in Action, was a club for students who were interested in teaching. Observation day was the biggest day of the year for FEA. In February students spent a full day at either Syracuse Elementary or Wawasee Middle School with the teacher and grade level of their choice. This day was to help students decide if teaching was in fact the right career for them, or even if they were interested in the correct grade level or in the right department. President Abbey Blakeslee coordinated the whole event. Other activities involved communicating with the teachers and faculty about the teaching profession. FEA members and teachers got together late in the year for a small breakfast and talk, one on one. They also made a decision on whether or not they would like to apply for a scholarship for a teaching degree. President of FEA was Abbey Blakeslee; secretary-treasurer, Abby White; and Mr. Iden was the sponsor.

Impact inspires people.

Impact, formerly known as FCA (Fellowship of Christian Athletes), stood for Impacting Many People Adding to Christ's Territory. They met together to encourage each other and to learn about the different aspects of the Christian work. There were many different varieties of kids who shared in the activities of Impact with different interests. Impact met twice a month at the home of Mark and Cindy Lantz. They met at the Lantz home to pray and be with each other and to share the company of other Christians like themselves. They also met once a month at the high school. "No matter what students' involvement was at Impact or how many times they came, their attendance didn't matter. They were there to encourage and to be encouraged," stated Mrs. Judy. Impact was a great way to meet people and make new friends while sharing in the company of Christians.

Thespians enjoy variety of theater experiences

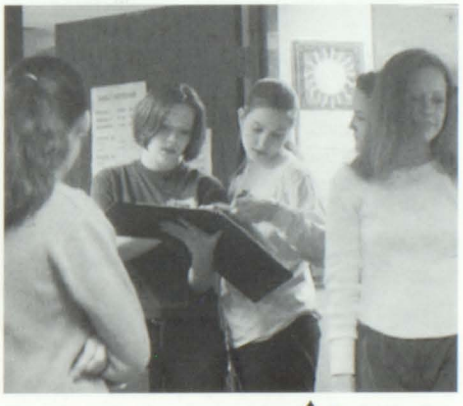

▲ 1

The Wawasee Thespians Chapter 5543 was part of an international group that involved going to see plays and helping with the plays at their own high schools. To become a thespian a student must have been involved in 2 or more plays and have accumulated a sum of 10 points. They had to be involved in two different areas involving the play. Once students became a thespian, there were standards they had to uphold like helping out with every play in one way or another. Being a thespian was an honor. Students didn't just join drama club and automatically become a thespian. "Thespians got to do more than the drama club, like go see plays outside of school in places like Chicago, Fort Wayne, and South Bend. We wanted everyone to become a thespian and get to experience all the things that we do," commented Kara Judy. Members on the thespian board were president, Lydia Shoemaker; vice-president, Kara Judy; secretary and treasurer, Rachel Wear; board members Katie Gregory, Adam Packer, Will Maule, Stephen Mahan, Brandon Magid, Tara Patterson, and Fallon Judd.

Jazz band gets a new style.

Jazz band had 15 members. It was Mr. Elliot's first year directing the jazz band. Mr. Elliot felt the program did well despite losing a lot of the members who were involved with the spring musical. The group started later than they would have liked in January, which left them little time to prepare for any outside activities. He would like to try and start the band earlier, around November. Members had their highs and lows, but did not get as far as they would have like this year due to the limited amount of time. They were going to participate in the Ball State Festival, but ran into some conflicts. The band performed at the spring pops concert in May. The members usually practiced together outside of school and enjoyed playing together. Mr. Elliot's goal was to try and get away from the pep band form of previous years and move into more of a jazz format and style of playing.

Key Club lends a helping hand.

The Key Club had 16 members. They were involved with community projects year round. "It was a great club for someone who wanted to help with the community and develop leadership skills," commented Key Club sponsor, Mrs. Pletcher. The group sponsored the penny pitch at Christmas and Market Day monthly. Joint-work was done with the local Kiwanis groups including pancake and sausage breakfasts and a chicken barbeque. Some of the members went to a training leadership seminar in Merrilville, Indiana. They also attended both the state convention in Indianapolis, Indiana, and the international convention in Anaheim, California. Members collected pop tabs for Riley Children's Hospital, money for UNICEF, and ran concessions at the gymnastics regional. Mrs. Pletcher's goal for the year was to accomplish the projects to the best of their abilities and help others in the community. Officers were president, Bo Lowman; vice-president, Joey Doherty; secretary, Stephanie Hesketh; treasurer, Bruce Yeager.

NHS provides service projects within school.

National Honor Society's goal was to provide service projects within the school. Its purpose was "to create an enthusiasm for scholarship, to have stimulated a desire to render service, to have promoted leadership, and to have developed character in the students of America's schools." NHS members cleaned up the hallways, tutored kids in ISTEP remediation, helped Key Club with the penny pitch, tutored elementary kids, sponsored a clothing drive, cleaned up the cafeteria after lunch, and helped in the hospitality room during the Academic Super Bowl competition. Mrs. Martin, the sponsor, mentioned that "There was work going forward to encourage the members to daily demonstrate service and leadership, as well as scholarship and character." Junior and seniors who had a grade point average of 9.500 or above became scholastically eligible for membership. Administration and faculty then evaluated the candidate's qualities of leadership, service, and character. Officers for the year were president, Jenn Bradford; vice-president, Caylyne DeGood; and recorder, Josh DeWitt.

SRT inspires a new club.

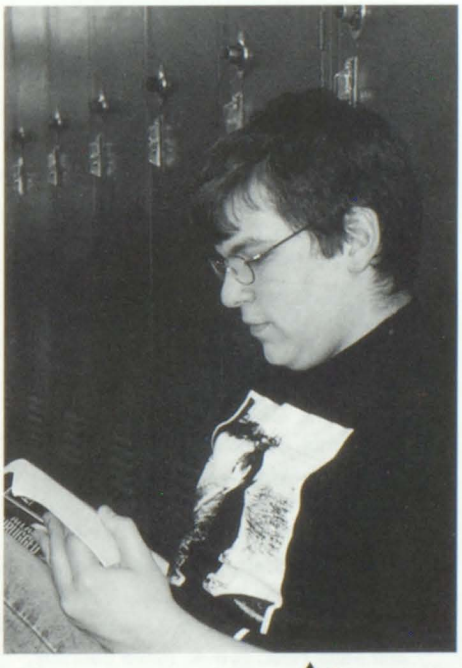

▲ 1

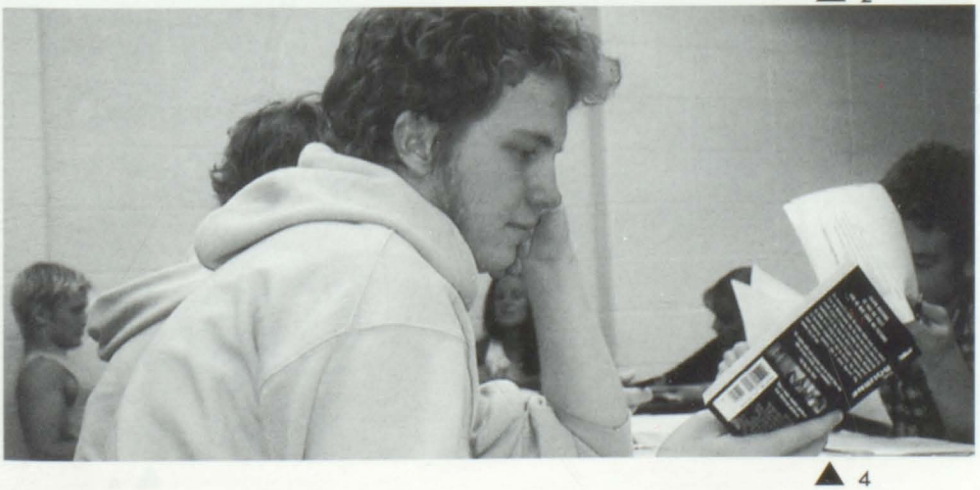

Reading club was a new group. Mrs. A. Miller decided to make a club for students who just wanted to relax and have a quiet reading time. SRT (silent reading time) inspired Mrs. Miller to organize this club. She had beanbags to sit on or students could sit in desks or on the floor. "It was great to see kids reading because they wanted to, not because they were being told to," she stated about the club. She was also curious to see who would join in upcoming years. It was also impressive to see the different types of students who attended reading club each week. Even though it was mostly females, some males attended too. Athletes, academic students, or just kids who liked to read, freshmen through seniors, anyone was welcome to join. On occasion Mrs. Miller talked to club members briefly about a best seller's list and about each author. Mrs. Posthuma was also an associate sponsor with Mrs. Miller.

The SRC organizes school events.

The student representative council, also known as SRC, was made up of individuals from the freshman, sophomore, junior and senior classes. The student body president of SRC was Jon Dingeldein and the student body vice-president was Caylyne DeGood. All these individuals contributed in many ways to the school. They organized the school dances, and they also decorated the areas where the dances were held. Homecoming every year has been very successful because of the planning and organizing of SRC members. The SRC members had monthly meetings to discuss important topics. They also organized "So Long Senior Week," a children's Christmas party for Life-Long Ministries, the Christmas canned food drive, and grounds cleanup. A group also met regularly with Mr. Frank to provide input to the administration on rules and regulations of the school. They did many things for the school that nobody realized or recognized.

Guys' cross country stays ahead of the pack.

Coach Dave Stookey led the guys' cross-country team with help from managers Emily Stoffel and Kristi Edwards. The team had great leadership from team captains Flaco Perales and Ryan Stichter. The guys had a successful season despite battling injuries and illness to their second, fourth, and fifth runners. They kicked off their season with a first-place team finish at the Hoke Farm Invitational. They had a 6-1 record in a very talented conference. Their one loss came to Northridge by only one point. The guys competed in the Wayne Invitational where they ran to another first-place team finish. They tied for second in the conference. Despite obstacles, the guys were able to go as far as semi-state in the state tournament. They ran to second place finishes at both sectionals and regionals before ending their season with a tenth-place finish at the semi-state meet. Flaco Perales advanced to the state meet as an individual with a tenth place finish. Perales gained all-state status by finishing in twenty-third place at the state meet. Even though they were unable to reach the state meet, the team did set a new five man school record at the semi-state meet at Manchester which was known for being a fast course and also where the last record was set two years ago. The season had many positive aspects. The team lost four talented seniors in Flaco Perales, Ryan Stichter, Eric Gingerich, and Chris Smeltzer, but had a strong group of incoming freshmen and letter winners returning for next season. Coach Stookey felt, "the season was an overall success." Award winners were Flaco Perales, low point award; Luke Stoffel, runner-up low point award; Ryan Stichter and Eric Gingerich, coach's award; Johnny Adams, rookie of the year; Shane Ostendorf, most-improved runner; Flaco Perales, MVP.

Girls' cross-country races to victory.

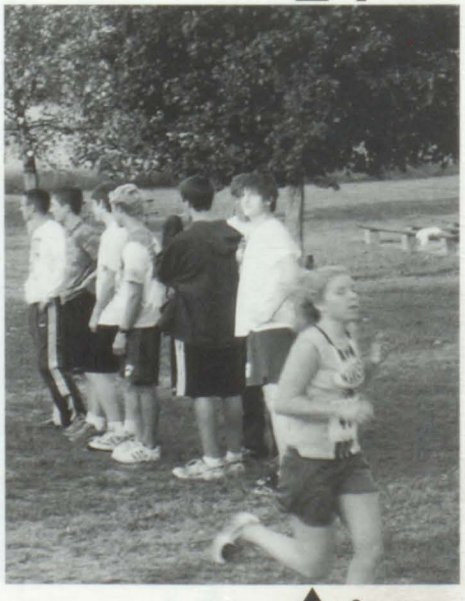

Grace Stichter's first official year as head coach of the girls' cross-country team proved to be a successful one. She had some help from the guys' team managers Kristi Edwards and Emily Stoffel. The team had fun times with captains Jessica Lundgren and Meghan Lantz. They started off with a first-place finish at the Hoke's Farm Invitational for the second consecutive year. The team faced a double loss in their first meet with Northridge and Warsaw. The girls were disappointed with the three-point loss to the Tigers, but bounced back in their second meet to get a victory over Elkhart Memorial. The girls' cross-country team continued their winning efforts with victories in the rest of the meets. A highlight of the season was a victory over conference teams Plymouth and NorthWood in the final home meet. It was the first winning season for the girls' cross-country program since the early nineties with a 4-3 record. They went on to place third at both the conference meet and sectionals. The girls finished seventh at a highly talented regional meet. They just missed advancing to semi-state meet by thirteen points. Rachel Stichter advanced on to semi-state and ran to a first-place finish and earned a trip to the state meet for the second time. Rachel battled the hilly course and wind and finished in eleventh place and received all-state honors at the state meet. Emily Stoffel enjoyed working with the team and thought they were a fun group of girls. Coach Grace Stichter felt it was the best season in the four years she had helped the team. They worked harder than before because they knew they had a chance of doing well. The team lost three talented seniors in Crystal Fawley, Shannon Mumma, and Abbey Blakeslee, but had a strong group of incoming freshmen and returning letter winners for next season. Meghan Lantz commented, "We are going to state next year; we're going to be awesome." Shannon Mumma stated, "We had a successful season and I will miss the team next year." Jess Lundgren added, " We had a good season and we'll miss the seniors." Boys' baseball takes hard hit.

Baseball started off their season early. Lifting weights, practicing, and working together during the off season gave them a head start. Captains Jon Dingeldein and Kyle Lantz believed that to have good attitudes and to never give up were important elements. Due to graduation in 2002, the team lost many experienced senior players, but the boys' baseball team tried to recover from their loss. Early in the season they played two big games against Whitko and Heritage, but unfortunately lost both games. During spring break the team took their annual trip down south for a series of exhibition games. Jon Dingeldein was the only senior who made the trip. At the end of April, the varsity had a record of 2-9-1. Senior Kyle Lantz stated, "Even with a less than perfect record, everyone was trying to keep good attitudes and have fun." The team was looking forward to playing experienced teams for good competition.

Their conference record was 1-1. Jay Goshert and Kathy Likens assisted Coach Cory Schutz. Although Kathy had just graduated in the previous year, she was a great help and excellent for the girls. Cheerleaders make a few changes.

Varsity cheerleaders added two more girls to the squad as well as two new assistant coaches. With ten girls it was a battle for all to be on the track or the floor. They all took turns sitting out each quarter. Two girls would sit and help lead spirit from the stands. All ten were able to participate in pre-game, starting line up, quarters, and time outs. Assisting head coach Kim Conrad were Angie Nine and Heather Brandt. The basketball squad made it through the year without guy lifters. The girls became better stunters and proved that they do not need lifters to be a better performing squad. They were able to do everything they did in previous years and more. All three squads were usually active in cheerleading camp every summer, but in the summer of 2002 they were not able to travel. They made an agreement that every other year they would stay home and have camp come to them. Camp lasted for three days. During those three days they learned new dances, chants, stunts, safety techniques, and how to become a better cheerleader. Also every few years varsity received new uniforms. All the girls voted on a new style then passed down an old uniform to JV. JV turned around and offered one of theirs to the freshmen. On September 28, the cheerleaders hosted their third annual cheerleading competition at Wawasee. JV/Varsity combined together as one large squad. They placed 4th out of 5. Freshmen placed 2nd. The cheerleaders also participated in the talent show. They performed the dance they learned for competition. The Seniors create unforgettable memories.

The senior class had an unforgettable year. There were many memories that everyone would keep with them throughout their lives. Some of these memories included homecoming, prom, graduation, and the memories of being with friends for the last time. The student body president and vice-president were Jon Dingeldein and Caylyne DeGood. The senior class president was Jessica Leach and the vice-president was Annie Richardson, with Kate Rummel as secretary-treasurer. The seniors carried out the traditional leadership role during homecoming. They proudly won the overall homecoming competition by posting victories with the penny race, talent show and float competitions. Memories of the prom "Come away with me" would remind the seniors of the enchanting evening of gowns, tuxes, dancing, laughing and great friendships. On May 30th the senior class took their last class walk together as they ended their high school career at the graduation ceremony.

"Come away with me."

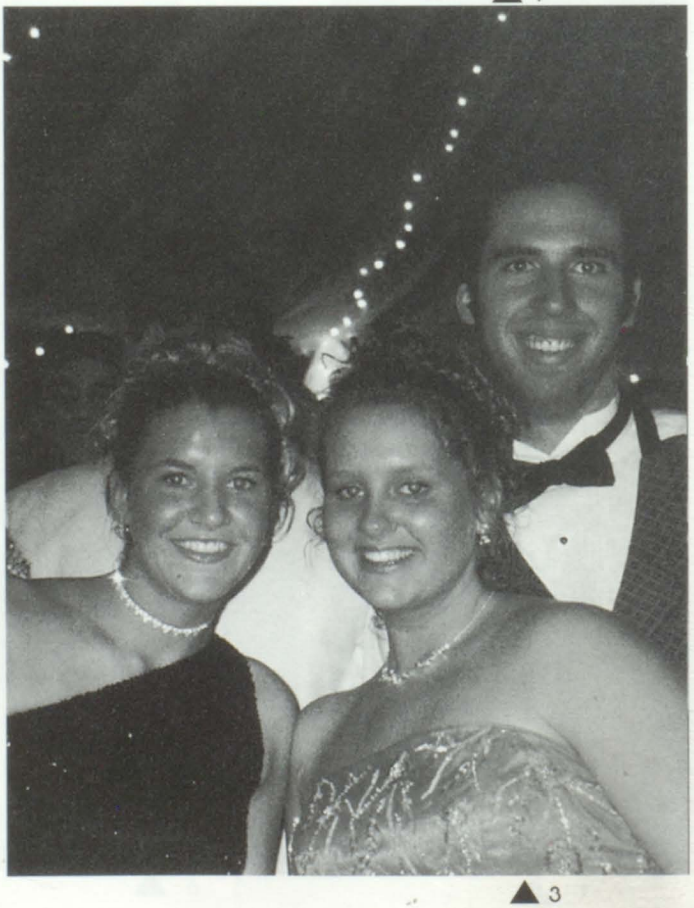

The prom turned out to be a beautiful scene as it was held for the first time at Oakwood. There was valet parking with parent volunteers parking cars and then retrieving them when couples left the prom. The theme was "Come away with me" with colors of black, white, red and gold. There was the traditional garter ceremony and a senior toast that many people took part in. The crowning of the queen and king of prom took place at 11:15. Jen Bradford was crowned queen, and Alex Smith was crowned king. After these two were crowned, they danced to the prom theme song " Come Away With Me." Everyone had a wonderful time and made the most out of the night. At after-prom there were games, food and a hypnotist. Five seniors volunteered to sit in front of the audience and were hypnotized. They then were asked various questions. Students had fun watching their classmates get hypnotized and make fools out of themselves. On Sunday the seniors continued to celebrate by going to Cedar Point, the Dunes, Chicago and Fort Wayne.

We must not only act, but dream and believe.

Despite a rain storm and a blown amplifier, the class of 2003 managed to have a successful graduation ceremony. After words of welcome from Dr. Stock and senior class president Jessica Leach, the class marched into the gym to "Pomp and Circumstance" played by the high school orchestra. Eric Gingerich gave the invocation followed by Annie Richardson's introduction of salutatorian Kyle Lantz. Kyle urged his classmates to have a positive impact on the world they were about to enter. The show choir's selection of "Let There Be Peace on Earth" was especially appropriate considering both the recent war in Iraq and the ongoing war on terrorism. Kate Rummel then introduced valedictorian Jon Dingeldein who reminded the class of not only the earth shattering events that had taken place during their four years together, but also the fun times. After a few words of advice, Principal Alan Frank handed out diplomas and certificates of attendance as Vice-Principal Dave Matz read the 236 names. The traditional turning of the tassels and candle lighting ceremony were followed with the benediction by Lydia Shoemaker to conclude the program. By that time the rain had stopped, and the new graduates gleefully threw their hats in the air at the front of the school to celebrate.

The Juniors are one step closer.

The junior class had 216 students making it the smallest class here at Wawasee High School. At homecoming they received first place in the girls' powderpuff game beating the seniors in the first game and going into the final against the sophomore class. Junior girls were victorious over the sophomores in overtime to win the powderpuff game. They were not so well off in the float competition. The class of '04 received a 3rd place ranking. In the taco eating contest, the juniors earned a 2nd place but wound up the week with a 4th place finish in the penny pitch with a negative $26.00. Junior class court representatives were Luke Stoffel and Libby Brown. The class fundraiser, consisting of Christmas gifts, wrapping paper, candy, and some toys, sold an outstanding amount of $5,500. The U.S. history class who sold the most received a pizza party. Mr. Taylor's 5th hour were the winners. The money earned in the fundraiser went into the treasury to be spent on senior activities such as prom and graduation.

The sophomores are half-way finished.

The sophomore class had a nice start to their year. In only their second year of competing in the annual homecoming events, they put together a strong performance. They received second place finishes in the talent show, float, and powder puff game after going into overtime with the juniors. They also finished in fourth place in the taco eating contest and third place in a successful penny pitch race. The sophomore class at the end of the homecoming festivities finished in a second place tie with the juniors, each having 13 points. Homecoming court representatives were Carly Murphy and Jordan Swain. In December the sophomores also participated in the annual Christmas penny pitch. The class of 05' held their annual chicken barbecue fundraiser in the spring for the class treasury and to help pay for homecoming expenses.

The class of 2006 promises to be amazing.

The freshmen were exceptional. As homecoming spirit took hold of Wawasee High, the frosh powderpuff team played their hearts out. They came in third, beating the seniors. Though the freshmen came in fourth in the float contest, in the taco-eating contest at the powderpuff bonfire they won first place. The class rings were ordered in November, a freshman class tradition. The freshman class council officers were Jason Beer, vice president; Tiffany Fick, president; and Allison Thornburgh, secretary and treasurer. Traveling through the first three years of high school with the freshmen were the class sponsors. The freshmen had 16 sponsors. In homeroom they created their three-year folder that would hold their Work Keys test scores and eventually their I-STEP scores. The freshmen of 2006 were a new generation of spirit and eager to learn what Wawasee High had to offer them.

This small, but mighty team worked hard.

The yearbook had four members working on the different sections making up the book. The theme was "All mixed up" and featured puzzle pieces and students mixed together throughout the book. The cover displayed different views of the school in puzzle pieces, a design created by Herff Jones. Due to the small staff, everyone helped get pictures needed to complete spreads. The yearbook consisted of 208 pages on 8.5x11 paper. The paper that was used was #80 Bordeaux. Six hundred copies of the yearbook were sold during registration in August and by mail. Herff Jones of Shawnee Mission, Kansas, published the Legend. The staff had six deadlines and they successfully met all of them. The total cost for the yearbook was $ 22,110.39; the books cost $ 36.85 each, but the students only had to pay $ 28.00 each because of the ads the staff sold.

Life is like a jigsaw puzzle,
Sort of.
You start out with a bunch of pieces,
And no idea of what the thing is
Going to look like
In the end.
And we start
Searching through all the pieces.
Now and then, we
Find a couple that go together.
Then, one day, a passerby
Informs us that it might be
Wise to build the framework
First . . . .
We sift through our pieces
And create the boundaries of
Our Lives.
We now know how big the picture really is.
And we begin to fill it in earnest . . . .
Pieces manage to find a way
To escape our notice, and
Flee to the floor.
Some of us have more cluttered
Floors than others.
Most of us, at one point
Or another, realize that there
Are pieces missing,
And we start to look for them.
The fortunate find their missing pieces,
While the fool can't see something
Is wrong.
The insane joyfully eat their pieces,
While the hopeless sweep their puzzles
To the floor, only to be left
Picking up the pieces.
On and on we go,
Until at last it is complete . . . .
But there are those who:
Upon seeing somebody trying to force two pieces together, knowing they Don't fit, or someone who is so frustrated with their puzzle that they
Are on the verge of destroying it, will put their own puzzle aside for a while Those special few who put their
Pieces down, to help the poor . . . .
Even if it means losing sight
Of an important piece
Of their own life,
That is what I someday hope
To be.
